JUDGE'S SONG IN COMIC OPERA RANKS HIGH

The song of the judge, in the comic opera, "Trial by Jury," in which the judge tells the courtroom spectators how he became a judge, is rated by critics as one of the cleverest songs to be found in any of the Gilbert and Sullivan shows. In a list including the six best lyrics, the judge's song is placed second.

An exceptionally great song, full of lively humor and amazing frankness, it gives a complete picture of this unblushing judicial jobber. The music enriches the irony. One of the merriest fellows in Gilbert and Sullivan shows, he accepts the respect and homage which English court audiences always accord the judge, and in return he offers to tell them how he rose to judgeship. Gilbert's fondness for self-made men is apparent in this character. The judge makes no pretense to intellectual eminence; he acknowledges that "of beauty he's a judge," he confesses that he achieved his high position through marrying a rich attorney's elderly, ugly daughter and furthermore, that as soon as he attained his high position, he managed to get rid of her.

The part of the judge is taken by Frank Grubbe, who is well known to Roseburg audiences as a singer of unusual ability. Mr. Grubbe has a voice of fine quality and power and interprets the part of the jovial judge with finesse and imagination. As an actor he is receiving the admiration of the entire cast and all who have witnessed rehearsals of the show. The ticket sale for this opera will open the first of the week and the proceeds of this benefit affair will go to the Roseburg swimming pool fund. Miss Helene Robinson is directing the opera.
