With big Germany pounding her on one side and big (what-ever else she may be she is big) Russia pounding her on the other, little Turkey would be ground like the grain between the mortar and the pestle.

AS for Britain's rumored intention to send troops in large numbers to the aid of Greece, it sounds good, but if you are a careful student of your maps you will keep your fingers crossed.

Germany can pour armies down into Greece by land, subject only to minor harassment by British planes. Britain must move an army across the Mediterranean from Africa, and maintain long and rather precarious supply lines by water.

Some way it doesn't seem to make sense. AS to Stalin, one wonders if he doesn't sometimes regret the spilling of so many of Russia's best brains by firing squads before blank walls.

After all, brains are about all that can help in a national pinch.

MEANWHILE—Eighteen Hollanders are CONDEMNED TO DEATH in Amsterdam by a German court martial. They were charged with espionage and sabotage and terrorism against the German army.

German soldiers, it seems have been pushed into the water and drowned. There is talk of a plot to poison German soldiers with acids.

Don't overlook such things as these among the obstacles Hitler has to face.

American Legion Auxiliary Activities

By MRS. WALTER FISHER Our Motto: We honor the dead by serving the living.

March the fifteenth, looms large as an important date for the Umpqua Unit of the American Legion auxiliary. Throughout that day, at 205 W. Cass street in Roseburg, Mrs. Roy Young, chairman of the community service committee, will provide applicants from the auxiliary with registration blanks for defense service for the nation in time of need.

Under the inspiring leadership of Umpqua Unit's president, Mrs. Claude Baker, auxiliary members are entering enthusiastically upon the nation-wide program for national defense. Under the auxiliary's registration plan, members are allowed four choices of service—all of which is voluntary, of course—outside service, which includes automobile driving, cooking and serving in canteens and caring for the homeless and needy.

Now to go back to that intriguing matter of the Legion birthday party next Saturday night. We have it from a reliable source (we get that way by listening to these foreign war radio commentators over KRNR) that our South Douglas friends from Days Creek are coming to the party.

At the regular unit meeting Tuesday night, Mrs. E. A. Post, auxiliary Red Cross contact chairman, urged members to enter the first aid class which is being started about April 15.

SERIAL STORY DUDE COLLEGE

BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Half terrified, Ronnie and Wes enter the cave, lighting their way with a torch. They discover a large room a short distance from the entrance. Food and clothing are stored in boxes. In a large box they discover rifles, automatics and ammunition.

MORE SECRETS DISCOVERED

CHAPTER XVIII

"What on earth would Lona Montoya hide such things for?" Ronnie Bailey was murmuring as if to herself, rather than to Wesley. "Especially away out here in a wilderness canyon."

"Hold your torch to the flame," Wes directed. "Mine is burning low. And I'm not sure she did it."

"Then who did?" "Don't ask me, tell me. But I do know this, Ronnie—this find is significant some way."

"I'm not afraid, but I think the smoke might leave telltale signs of our being here."

From his knees before a box he suddenly looked up admiringly at her. "You'd make a good outdoorsman, Ronnie. You think of practical things. But there's a ventilating draft. Cracks in the rocks back here afford wind outlets. I tested that as we came in."

"Can we look in the biggest box now? It's like a trunk, really."

He opened this largest box with heightened interest because of the guns and ammunition already found. Would this be explosives? Dynamite and caps, maybe, such as miners use? But no, this cache could hardly be for use by prospectors.

He lifted the lid and at once they saw a peculiar set of instruments—wires, tubes, electric switches, coils, small black housings, batteries.

"It's a radio set!" Wesley said, studying it carefully. "Transmitter and receiver both!"

"Goodness, Wes!" "Rather powerful set, too. I think I don't know too much about them, but this equipment looks elaborate to me."

"It is elaborate. I have a set in my plane, remember. I know." "I think we'd better get out of here, Ronnie!"

They looked quickly behind the stack of boxes. Several pairs of men's shoes were there. Also neat rolls of blankets and several two-quart canteens. A push at the canteens showed them full, doubtless of water.

horses and up Rainbow canyon again. Childish minds might well have seen many a ghost here now, for the cliffs were phantom giants leaning over to clutch at puny humans, and off to the east came a wavering "O-U-U-U-U!" which was but some coyote in his customary overture to the stars. Presently the riders were back on the trail which Wesley had used in coming to the cliff dwelling.

"We can eat some of our food," he suggested. "It is quite a ride in, you know. There are candy bars, for instance."

"They ate, and drank from their canteens. "Gee-mi-nee, Wes, I'm even nervous out here!" Ronnie laughed now. "Do you suppose maybe Lona is—?"

"No, I'm sure not. She will have gone straight back to Pueblo, I believe."

"I've never had so much fun. Never!" Wesley considered that. "Say, it is fun, isn't it? Adventuring!" He felt younger; less a professor and more a boy. Their talk took on more intimate tones.

"Let's—let's not tell any one just yet," suggested he. "I—we have found something important, but—"

"Good!" she stage-whispered. "Keep the secret. Until—?"

"Until I can conduct some private investigation. Listen, Ronnie, I haven't told you, but there are some other things happening this fall that need explaining, and this adds to them."

"Such as?" "Well, I wouldn't want to talk too much until I felt more sure. But you can trust me... Ronnie, I—I somehow feel that you and I are friends!"

Ronica turned in her saddle to look gently up at Wesley York. His tone more than his words had somehow gripped her attention in a new way. He looked strong there beside her, riding gracefully and erect.

"Then you have been lonely, Wes, I felt it. Of course I want to be your friend, and want you to be mine. Didn't I say back there you'd make a swell big brother?"

Papa, 81, Mama, 27, and Baby

Mighty proud parents are Mr. and Mrs. James Eklison of Springfield, Ore., as they hold little John Huston Eklison, age two months. Eklison, a gardener and former logger, who attributes his health to hard work, is 81, while his wife is 27.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS Life is as a cross-country journey, lying over valley and hill. Mountains hold little fear for men. It is the valleys that discourage. The challenge is to conquer the valley, to climb it. Make a hill out of it and then climb it. A young girl was in a hospital, and the doctors had been unable to find the trouble. The family so sorely needed her services. I've never felt so blue, so down-hearted. Ships at sea give us a parable for such a case. Formerly when the ships met a storm they would immediately take the defense. They would draw in sails, close the hatches, fasten down movable objects, then make up their minds to endure it in some way or other. Today mighty leviathans act differently. With full speed ahead they drive fearlessly into the very teeth of the storm. So in the face of storms of discouragement we, too, must put on full speed ahead, looking to the Master Pilot for our encouragement. For if God be for us, who can be against us, in all these things, distress, tribulation, persecution, famine, nakedness, peril, sword, we are more than conquerors, through Him that loved us. Amen.

RAMBLINGS

By PAUL JENKINS

I'M going to turn this column over today to the reprinting of an editorial appearing in the "Round-Bout News," local publication edited (in this instance) by Jeanne Ackley, 11-year-old Roseburg student. "Trile By Jurey was given at the Indian Theater last week. The earnings were given to the swimming pool fund. We need a swimming pool badly. In the previous years we have had to swim in the river. Some parents want their children swim in the river and so the children sneak off to river and go swimming. If the parents wont let them thier swimming suits they swimming anyhow. If we had a swimming pool the parents would know their children were safe from drowning and not be swimming in a river in which there are several sewers. Give a few pennies to the fund. We need a swimming pool and we will get one if people will cooperate."

Well, now, I ask you: Isn't the logic of the whole swimming situation summed up exactly in the above? We ought to have that pool, if for no other reason than to relieve the embarrassment of those determined youngsters, whose parents have held out on their swimming suits.
