

Oakland Student Wins Scholarship In Course of Law

Howard H. Campbell, of Oakland, a second year student in Columbia university school of law, has been designated a James Kent scholar on the basis of his first-year record in the New York City school.

Five such awards are made annually as academic honors to students, in each of the three classes, who have maintained the highest scholastic averages during the previous year.

Campbell, who prepared for Columbia law school at Reed college, is on the editorial board of the Columbia Law Review, one of the foremost legal publications of our times. The journal, published monthly by a board of student editors chosen on a basis of scholarship, contains articles by leading members of the bar as well as notes written by the students.

Campbell is also the recipient of the Charles B. Beck prize, awarded annually to the member of the first-year class who ranks highest in the course on the law of real property. As preparation for his final year in the law school, he will be associated with the prominent New York firm of Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine during the coming summer.

The Oregon student is a holder of one of the regional scholarships given by the law school. About thirty of these awards are made to each entering class on a competitive basis. The country is divided into geographical areas, and a number of scholarships are given in each area to outstanding graduates of accredited institutions.

Jesus taught that the best things are to be secured by renunciation. The student loses much in order to gain scholarship. The gold-seeker loses much for the sake of treasure. Both of these, however, are measurably selfish. Let us come up higher. Here is a boy leaving home for training. What has he gained? It is not a question of what he gains, but what is the cause for which he is preparing to fight. Who is it that loses life? Really it is he who does not know the meaning of sacrifice. He of the self-centered life. There are two ways of treating life. One is to look upon it as a possible field for adventure or exploitation. The other is to look upon it as a field of grain, with difficult soil to be broken up, dry places to be irrigated, swamps to be drained, seed to be planted, weeds to be pulled out in order that the harvest will be rich and full. This is the loss that pays in the end. The real heroes of the world are those who have not even considered loss. They endured the cross, despising the shame that they might lay hold of the joy that was set before them. No man lives well until he has renounced that which is less in his life. "Because the way was steep and long and through a strange and lonely land, God placed upon my lips a song, and put a lantern in my hand." Amen.

U. S., Canada Sign St. Lawrence Pact

WASHINGTON, March 20.—(AP)—The United States and Canada signed an agreement yesterday to proceed immediately with development of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence river seaway and power project as a vital joint defense measure.

The state department, in announcing the signing, made public an exchange of notes in which President Roosevelt linked the project with the policy of aiding Britain to win the war.

An engineering report gave the total estimated cost as $266,170,000 for the entire development. The immediate objectives are an increase of power production in the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence river and an outlet for shipbuilding facilities in the Great Lakes area.

Mr. Roosevelt plans to transmit the agreement with a request for the necessary appropriations. The same day it will go before the Canadian parliament.

Revival of the plan through an agreement rather than a treaty obviates the necessity of ratification by the senate. The senate failed in 1934 to approve a waterway treaty by the necessary two-thirds vote.
