Labor Stands to Lose Much

UNLESS sane and patriotic leadership of organized labor moves with great force, and at once, to settle the defense program tie-ups caused by strikes, U. S. labor is going to have chalked up against it the blackest mark in all its history.

fought in the legislature to saddle the low income people of Oregon with most of the $1,500,000 annual tax on cigars did their orating with one eye on the gallery—knowing full well that their pleas for old age pensions would get them votes, in spite of the unpopularity of the tax.

Senator Wheeler of Montana is reported starting on a crusade against war. His work will be done in the Midwest. Perhaps it will be a chance to get some good practice—like fly-casting on a lawn—but if he really wants to do a job his efforts should be put forth in Germany.

A smile being so much easier and relaxing for the face muscles, why do you suppose it is that so many people go around looking sour and cross?

This being an off-year political year, correct the well known practice line to read: Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of Britain.

SERIAL STORY

DRAFTED FOR LOVE

BY RUTH AYERS

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: April calls Ann, tells her Kent is home, asks her to catch the midnight train. Ann refuses, says the audition she has been waiting for is to be held.

TRUST IN TOMORROW

April Burnett was a great believer in tomorrows. Perhaps Mother and Dad would return ahead of time from the camping trip and figure a way out of this situation.

"Hello, Kent—bet you could never guess what sweet young hero worshiper this is." She was all April now as she held the telephone cupped close to her mouth.

"I'm hardly that." He made a forced attempt at laughter. April lowered her voice. "Kent, in all seriousness, Ann wanted me to send word to you."

"Oh, yes. Oh, my, I should say so," she answered. "Everything will be fine tomorrow." "I guess it won't hurt me any either to slack up tonight. Army routine's pretty tough, you know."

"You know how Ann is," April was whispering, as if Ann herself might be overhearing. "She's not very strong."

April wore a new black net dress, with a skirt billowing in yards-and-yards and a bodice cunningly sprinkled with small silver sequins.

Hal was handsome, with smooth dark hair and a mustache that gave him a debonaire, man-about-town look.

He helped her out of the car. "Sure I am," he said with vast aplomb. "And remember this, honey, there are other ways of being drafted besides for the army."

"What's the trouble, April?" One of the trio of young men escorting her leaned forward. "There's a perfectly good rumba going to waste and you haven't noticed a single imploring look in our eyes."

"No, it's not that." He made a forced attempt at laughter. April lowered her voice. "Kent, in all seriousness, Ann wanted me to send word to you."
