Monroe and Mow-Down Doctrines

A FEW Americans are being led down a mental one-way street these days that leads smack up against a brick wall.

Why not let Germany control all of Europe, Russia all of east Europe and west Asia, Japan all of east Asia and the western Pacific?

The answer is simple. There is no connection whatever between what Germany is doing in Europe, Russia in Europe and Asia, Japan in Asia, and the Monroe Doctrine-Pan American plan for the western hemisphere.

In the 118 years since the Monroe Doctrine, no American nation has ever lost its sovereignty because of it. It has certainly preserved the sovereignty of many.

The United States has never claimed exclusive or special commercial rights in any country. If you think there is no difference between that policy and those of the Germans and Japanese, try to do a little business in Manchuria today, or in Poland.

The United States does not interfere today with the way any American country conducts its internal affairs, and it has not done so in the past except in a few cases where internal disorder was real, and where worse interference from Europe was threatened.

To be acting in the German-Japanese "new order" style, the United States would already have had to seize Mexico and all the American countries south to the canal, as well as Colombia and Venezuela on the north coast of South America. It would have had to infiltrate thousands of spies into the rest of South America with a view to creating stooge governments ready to take over at a signal.

These things we have not done, and do not propose to do. First, we don't think that way, and second, we do not have huge minorities of American residents in those countries sporting a phony double citizenship that gives them the protection of local laws while demanding their ultimate allegiance to the U. S.

People fool themselves badly if they think that the United States could sit back serenely in its hemisphere if the rest of the world were parceled out into three or four packages. For the aggressors have a complete domination over their areas, economic, political and military, which the United States does not have and does not want in this hemisphere. With the rest of the world closed against us except on the terms of a handful of conquerors, our own hemisphere would be left open on equal terms to all, ripe for infiltration and covert conquest as a preliminary to actual military subjection.

No. Our way will work only if the seas and most of the rest of the world are reasonably free. That is why our whole future hangs on keeping it free.

But There Was No Peace—

BACK from Tahiti to the United States comes now Hester Parsons, in search of peace. Six years ago she and her family fled the United States for Tahiti, in search of peace. But there was no peace.

The island paradise is being squabbled over by Vichy and Free French adherents. There is rioting and battling and dueling. And so, after six years of "escape," Mrs. Parsons has escaped back where she came from, having found, apparently, that the only satisfactory solution is the one over which Hamlet hesitated, "to take arms against a sea of troubles, and by opposing, end them."

THESE same military experts note signs today that the long-threatened invasion of England may be in the making. One of these signs is the speed boat battle in the English channel reported the other day.

Whatever may happen next, we may expect events to move swiftly this spring. The war is approaching its crisis.

RUSSIA lifts the curtain of absolute censorship for a moment today to permit brief accounts of the annual May day parade of soviet war strength in Moscow to reach the outside world.

The correspondents are permitted to tell of truck-borne infantry and masses of motorized artillery rumbling through Red Square.

Defense Commissar Timoshenko warns (in the hearing of the correspondents): "Russia is ready to offer ANNIHILATING REBUFF to any ENCROACHMENT by imperialists."

In a special order of the day, he emphasizes steps taken by Russia during the past year AT THE BEHEST OF STALIN to reorganize her armed forces "in the light of experience and modern warfare."

WISHEFUL thinkers will find hope in all this. This writer's advice is to do no wishful thinking about Russia.

This is no time to do wishful thinking ABOUT ANYTHING.

THE Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in session at Washington, calls on patriotic labor and industrial leaders to call a moratorium against all strikes which would interrupt production.

To this call all patriots must add a fervent "amen." This is no time to interrupt production for any cause whatsoever.

Let's save our country FIRST.
