It's Moving Day for Fritz Wiedemann

Anonymous phone threats to bomb new quarters of the Nazi Consulate in San Francisco lent excitement to moving day as Captain Fritz Wiedemann, German consul general, and his staff vacated office building quarters for a $44,000 home purchased by Wiedemann. Captain Wiedemann, top, checks cases of papers in his new office; below, the new Consulate, which property owners in the vicinity are protesting. With 24 local policemen on guard, there wasn't a sign of trouble.
