Local Class Hears Talks on Camping Facilities, Fishing

Meeting demands for increased recreational use of the national forests, much stress has been placed upon development of picnic and camping spots in the Umpqua national forest, V. V. Harpham, supervisor, told the class at the chamber of commerce tourist information school last night. During the past few years, he reported, the Umpqua national forest has been provided with 218 improved overnight camping spots. Each of these camps has been furnished with stove, tables and benches and the camp areas are provided with running water, garbage, disposal and sanitary facilities.

In addition to the camps, well distributed between the North and South Umpqua, Diamond lake, Big Camas, Wolf creek and Bohemia districts, the forest maintains picnic areas at Diamond lake, Camp Comfort, Eagle rock and Wolf creek. The picnic grounds are equipped to handle large crowds and have running water, tables, toilets, etc. More than 100 trail shelters also are provided along principal routes for the free use of persons hiking or riding through the forests. There is a rapid increase in the number of hikers and hiking clubs in western areas, he reports, and while this form of recreation so far has not developed materially on the Umpqua forest, preparations are being made to accommodate hikers expected to increase in number in the next few years.

Other Phases Discussed

The members of the class also heard an interesting talk by Sidney Fredrickson, of the Roseburg Camera club, who gave special advice on photography. He urged that special attention be given to detail of composition and stressed the interesting possibilities of photographic records of trips into scenic areas.

A talk on the fishing resources of the Umpqua valley was presented by Charles V. Stanton, city editor of the Roseburg News-Review, who told of the species of fish to be taken from streams and lakes, and of the seasons which provide all-year sports fishing.

Frank Wire, state game supervisor, will be the principal speaker at the class session next Tuesday, it was announced by Scott Williams, instructor. It is anticipated that motion pictures dealing with fish and game life will be shown.

Leaves for Portland—Mrs. Lester Campbell has left for her home in Portland, following a visit here with her sister, Mrs. Jack Melton, and other relatives.
