POET'S CORNER

TO THE OLD BUDDIES

Hi ya Buddie, how ya doin'? Got a place to eat and sleep? What's the matter, why so lonely Standing out here on the street?

Have you heard, they're wanting workmen. Say there's lots of work to do, Better sign up at the bureau— Perhaps they'll find a job for you.

Uncle Sam is spending billions, Simply throwing them away Building ships and planes and cannon— Getting ready for the day.

When we got to fight Ol' Hitler— Put his legions on the run; Free the peaceful little nations From the terror of the Hun.

What? They say there's nothing doing— We're to old to earn our pay— That our working days are over, And we're only in the way.

Never mind, Bud, keep your chin up. They'll be calling us some day; They'll be needing us and others.

They'll be glad to get us buddy, They won't care how old we are. They'll be glad to get us Buddy, And we'll help them win the war.

We won't strike for higher wages While we're helping Uncle Sam. We won't strike for shorter hours, We'll give all the time we can.

And when the war is over, And our boys come marching home, They will know us as their buddies, And we'll come into our own.

They'll look up the lowly poor house, They'll respect those old and gray, They'll remember how we helped them As they fought across the way.

There won't be the idle millions, That we read so much about, There won't be no monkey dinners, While the poor must go without.

Greed and avarice will be banished. War and treachery will cease. We'll be brothers, Buddy, brothers, Guided by the Prince of Peace.
