Look Out, World, Here They Come

AS this week ends another high school class has completed its course of study...

There will be some pessimistic comment about the misfortune of present day graduates...

It happens that the writer of these words can speak from his own personal experience...

And so it will doubtless be with the years that are ahead for the high school graduates...

these words are written, the German claims are undented by the British...

It is too early to draw definite conclusions. We can only guess from confusing dispatches.

INTEREST in the eastern Mediterranean sea fighting arises from the NATURE of it.

ish fleet stood up against German air attack.

THE battleship Hood, the pride of the British navy, was sunk by a German battleship.

If the British navy in the eastern Mediterranean has been disastrously battered from the AIR, it will be something else entirely.

IN Berlin, German Grand Admiral Raeder, speaking of conveying American supplies to Britain, says: "I can only echo the view of President Roosevelt that convoys mean shooting."

Elaborating, he says: "Since the nature of cargoes of conveyed ships, according to American admissions, would be established from the very beginning as contraband, resort to this type of convoy system would not be neutral in the sense of international or American treaties, but an OPEN WAR ACT and a bare, unprovoked attack."

"German naval forces would therefore be justified in taking measures against these conveyed carriers according to the law of sea warfare and would by exercise of these rights have to REPUSE WITH ARMS if necessary any hindrance—even against American warships."

(ADMIRAL RAEDER'S bellicose statement, it is interesting to note, is contained in an interview granted to Domei, the JAPANESE news agency. By inference, he is aiming to tell the Japs what will be expected of them.)

REFERRING to Raeder's statement, Secretary of State Hull accuses Germany of seeking by threats to induce the United States and the western hemisphere nations to refrain from making any real efforts at self-defense. What he means is that Germany is trying to bluff us—as we have been trying to bluff Germany.

The poker game that concerns us directly is getting hot.

Oregon Fish Life Gains Over Take, Class Here Told

It is a surprising thing that Oregon streams and lakes continue to show an abundance of fish life despite the terrific beating the fishing waters take each season. Frank Wire, state game supervisor, declared here last night. Speaking before the regular Tuesday meeting of the Tourist Information school, sponsored by the chamber of commerce and state department of vocational education, Mr. Wire said that tons of fish are taken each year from lakes and streams, yet the fish life appears to be gaining.

Many people who complain about fishing fail to realize that it takes longer to grow a fish to suitable size than it does for a deer to grow to a size where it may be hunted, Mr. Wire said. A deer may be legally killed after it is two years old, but it takes from three to four years for a trout to attain 12 or 14 inches in length.

Umpqua Problems Few He particularly praised the Umpqua river and its two main tributaries as fishing streams, stating that the game commission has fewer problems on the stream than any others. Power and irrigation dams, irrigation ditches and mining, he said, have proven very destructive to fish life and create great problems on many rivers.

He outlined briefly the types of fishing and hunting provided in Oregon, and followed his talk with two reels of motion pictures, one dealing with the fishing and scenic resources at Diamond lake, the other with the game commission's project in developing the sage grouse in eastern Oregon.

Last night's class at the tourist information school was the largest to date and crowded the seating capacity at the chamber of commerce office. The class members also heard interesting talks by Fred L. Perry, state policeman in the game law enforcement department on rules and regulations, and by Roy Foster, river guide, on North Umpqua recreational resources.
