Six Months

THIS is how the Germans are playing the game in Ecuador: People in the market for machinery there are being told that "if the United States can't deliver it within six months, better wait and order from Germany. By that time she will be able to deliver it."

That doesn't suggest as much German confidence in winning the war quickly as you might think. German salesmen down there can't deliver now; they have to say something; similar promises last year were not made good.

But it does suggest that the United States problem of production is greater than many realize even yet. Not only must we provide the sinews of war, but we must, in order to solidify our future trade position in the Americas, meet demands there, too. Remember the vital importance of this double task when you are asked to do without some product you had vaguely intended to buy, but can do without.

Four Thousand Years

WHEN the German dive-bombers leveled to the ground Candia in Crete, they brought four thousand years of history to full circle.

Here arose the first civilization in Europe. Here, in the small museum, unique and irreplaceable, lay the relics which told all that is known of Minoan civilization.

That wasn't much. They told merely that here, 4000 years ago, men lived in a state of civilization quite highly developed in some respects. Here they lived, here (for reasons that seemed to them adequate) they fought. Here they died.

Now on the same ground, 4000 years later, men who have also achieved quite a high state of civilization in some respects have fought and died, probably for about the same reasons. The more it changes, the more it is the same.

They Still Marry

IN spite of everything, people still get married.

During the past 12 months there must have been quite a few people in Cook county (Chicago) who didn't believe that everything was headed for the demerol bow-wow, for 46,914 couples stepped up to the marriage license desk, an increase of 27.5 per cent over the year before.

Meanwhile divorce also increased, but only 3.6 per cent to a total of 9737, about one-fifth as fast.

Since it has been jestingly argued that a man must be an optimist to marry at all, it must follow that those who marry at a time like this disagree profoundly with the prophets of doom who keep croaking that all is lost and nothing remains but to take to the lifeboats.

Editorials on News

In the weekend: "There will be no compromise." On Sunday he wired Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's secretary: "Armed forces will not break our strike. Bombers can't be made with bayonets."

ONE guesses there are to be two showdowns: 1. Between the government and those who insist on striking on defense work. 2. Between CIO's national leadership (Murray) and a radical (suspectedly communist) element in CIO.

IN connection with the taking over of the plant, the president says today:

"Their (the workers') fundamental rights as free citizens will be protected by the government and negotiations will be conducted through the process of collective bargaining to reach a settlement fair and reasonable to the workers and the company. The company has already stated that any settlement reached will be retroactive to May 1."

THAT is to say, the principle that is sought to be established is STAYING AT WORK while negotiations are being carried on. To average, patriotic citizens, it seems a sound and reasonable principle.

OVERSEAS, British and free French mechanized columns pushed into Syria from three directions, aiming primarily at the railroad port of Beirut.

As these words are written, the dispatches are vague (as they always are at the beginning of a big push.) The British say they are meeting "some French opposition." The French say they are "fighting fiercely." There are rumors of French officers and troops going over to the British.

The important point is that the British have taken the bull by the horns and are moving into Syria before the Germans have time to get fully established there.

THERE is a lot of talk of liberty, etc., which you will do well to disregard. The liberties of Syria right now are a remote side issue.

Syria is a battle ground, the Germans using it to ATTACK and the British using it to DEFEND the Near East and Egypt.

Keep in mind that the fighting reported today is a mere skirmish compared to what will develop later.

LETTERS to the Editor

QUESTIONS DEMOCRACY STATUS

BROCKWAY, Ore., June 9. Editor News-Review: Is it true that in a republic, the voter is the master and the elected-to-office the servant while likewise in a democracy, the government is the master and the governed the servants? The constitution of the United States specifically guarantees the republican form of government to the separate states and Jefferson constantly referred to the republic and the republican form of government. Then just how did our country ever become a "democracy"? The word was unknown among the founding fathers and the early people of this country and there is no mention of democracy in our history until about the time of Woodrow Wilson.

In world history, no democracy as such has ever survived—and probably never will.

W. L. McABOY, Brockway, Ore.

Visiting in Portland - Mrs. Harry Linser, of this city, is spending several days in Portland visiting her son, David Linser.

SERIAL STORY

DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS

BY EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY, But Anthony doesn't want to face Sheldrake. He tries to argue out of the idea. Finally admits that he knows the man, that it might cause trouble. See what what-what-what Fletcher calls Sheldrake. The man battles in, faces Anthony. "Who's you! Weeping has been spying on me." "Weeping!" Bee asks. "What has he to do with Mr. Bradley?"

"THAT MAN" AGAIN

CHAPTER XXIX BRUCE SHELDRAKE paid no attention to Beatrice. "So Mr. Curtis Weeping finds it necessary to plant stool pigeons in my store, does he?" he shouted. "He finds it necessary to provoke insubordination and make me trouble. He is not satisfied with heckling, with criticizing everything I have ever done. He is not content with stirring up hornets' nests at the bank. I've got to have them at the store, too!"

"He's sabotaged every piece of real progress I've ever attempted. How many other spies has he spotted throughout this store? How many stool-pigeon reports reports have been going out to him every week?" "I have not been a stool pigeon, Sheldrake!" Anthony retorted. "I happened to see a job, and I applied at this store and got the job. Mr. Weeping had nothing whatever to do with it! In fact, he didn't want me to work here. But I was fool enough to think I could build a career—I was fool enough to think Huntington's was still the honest, worthwhile organization it used to be."

Beatrice had never seen this Anthony before. "If Mr. Weeping happens to be investigating any angle of your activity, Mr. Sheldrake, I am of the opinion that it's a damn good thing. But he has not investigated through me!" "If he's been investigating?" shouted Bruce Sheldrake. He was a goaded bull, seeking red. "You know damn well he's been investigating! That dried-up old skunk has been gunning for me since the day I became general superintendent."

"I haven't made a single move in this store without bucking Weeping's paid old-timers at every turn. Mr. Huntington didn't do this. Mr. Huntington didn't do that! Who's running this store now, Mike Huntington or me?" "It's not my methods old man Weeping objects to. I've shown a profit at the end of every single year of my operation, and if he can find a better man for the job, I'd like to know where! I earn my bonus, and the hell with anyone who says I don't."

"Nobody, you hear me, nobody can find a damn thing wrong with my methods. They're not the sloppy, sentimental, outdated methods that used to run the roost around here, that's all. Old man Weeping's a lawyer, he doesn't know a thing about department store managing, yet he sits there in his office and tries to dictate to me. If I ran this store the way he wants, we'd close up in no time!"

The angry torrent poured out so vehemently that Beatrice knew Mr. Sheldrake had said all this before. Often.

SHE stepped between the two men. "Just a minute." Her tone held a dangerous sweetness. "That's all very interesting, Mr. Sheldrake, but I think we've had quite enough of it. I'd like to ask Mr. Bradley a question."

Mr. Sheldrake gaped. "Who are you?" "I have been working in the Budget fashions," she told him. "I have just resigned." She turned her back on him.

"Anthony Bradley, look at me. I want you to tell me exactly how it happened that you knew Beatrice Davenport had given her fiancé a string of polo ponies." Her voice was very even, almost gentle.

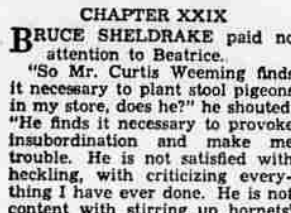

"I asked you once before, remember? You evaded the question. Please don't evade now. How did you know?" Anthony stared at her as if she had suddenly taken leave of her senses. "For God's sake, Bee, this is no time—"

"Answer me!" Sheldrake was spluttering. Fletcher was sinking weakly into his chair. Anthony kept right on staring at the small girl with the blazing eyes. "I heard her say she'd bought him polo ponies!" he exploded. "That's how I knew. I happened to be in my guardian's office while she came in, and I got out of the way. But I couldn't help hearing it. Look here, Bee, none of that matters. I didn't want you to—"

"You didn't want me to know you and Beatrice Davenport shared the same guardian, that's what you didn't want me to know!" "I didn't want anyone in the store to know!" "So you were spying on me, you orthless—" Mr. Sheldrake was in it now.

What do you mean—"It's the Water"?

Just this—the character of a beer depends on the water used in its brewing. At our Olympia Brewery is a rare and precious phenomenon of Nature—subterranean water with properties that make it possible to here brew a beer comparable with the famous products of the brewers of Burton and Munich. Money can buy fine equipment and quality ingredients. Experience and skill can combine these two into beer. But at Olympia is found water whose natural purity and superior brewing quality make Olympia a different and a better beer.
