Between Two Great Camps

It is a settled fact that there will be two 30,000-man army cantonments in western Oregon.

Last Saturday evening Myron K. Hunt, architect for the Medford cantonment construction, addressed a mass meeting here.

The situation so far as Eugene is concerned will not be quite so serious since the ratio of old population to new is more nearly equal.

But so far as the Umpqua valley is concerned, it seems that whatever effect these enormous camps will have will be all to the good.

(1) Improved rail transportation. It is certain that travel of all kinds between the two posts will compel the addition of better rail passenger service.

(2) Improved highway between Eugene and Medford. It would seem more than futile, since these units will be mechanized, if adequate highways are not prepared for operations between the two.

(3) Additional markets for produce of the Umpqua valley. Whether or not the produce grown here is sold to the army, the market for produce on the west coast will be enlarged.

(4) More highway traffic. The term "tourist" cannot be used, yet the effect so far as we are concerned will be the same. Highway traffic through our valley is an important source of revenue.

We shall, therefore, enjoy considerable direct and indirect benefit in the way of dollars from this army expansion. There is no way in which we can be of service to the troops. There is nothing we can do for them. They will be too far removed from us. Hence it is not simply money-grabbing to consider how these cantonments will benefit us—that seems to be about the only consideration we can give this development.

Mr. Hunt mentioned the method of the army uses in purchasing food supplies for such cantonments. Obviously, as he pointed out, it will not be possible for a single farmer to take a load of produce to either camp and expect to market it.

these necessities, the strangling effects of the blockade will be minimized.

There are two ways by which Germany can obtain from Russia what she wants:

- 1. By diplomatic dickering, backed up by threats. 2. By military conquest.

If you will leave wishful thinking behind and look at the situation realistically, you will be pretty sure to come to the conclusion that Russia will bluff as long as she dares but in the end will SUBMIT.

DURING every moment since the war began, a poker game has been in progress. The game has become increasingly stiff. The bluffing has grown in scale.

Stalin is putting up as good a bluff as he can. But if you can see him calling Hitler's military hand you are an optimist indeed.

STALIN'S and Hitler's isn't the only game of bluff that is going on. Jap Foreign Minister Matsuoka today (Saturday) telegraphs to Mussolini an endorsement of his recent declaration that "Japan will not remain indifferent in the face of AMERICAN aggression against the axis."

You will note that he doesn't say outright that if America goes to war with Germany and Italy Japan will not go to war with America. That isn't done in these days. Statesmen (Churchill excepted) prefer to speak with double tongues, so as to leave themselves free to double-cross whenever it seems most advantageous to run out on.

The bluff Matsuoka is running in his telegram to Hitler is directed at us, what he wants us to believe is that if we get ourselves into it in the Atlantic we'll have to face something we won't like in the Pacific.

Boys' and Girls' Aid Society Pleads for Funds

PORTLAND, Ore., June 17.—(Special)—Fifteen dependent children from Douglas county are receiving care from the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society of Oregon at the present time, according to a report released from society headquarters. Under supervision of the society, which provides clothing and medical and dental care, the children are placed in private family homes throughout the state.

The Boys' and Girls' Aid reports that since 1914, it has provided for 96 homeless and neglected children from Douglas county. Fifty-five per cent of the society's wards come from counties other than Multnomah, yet substantial financial support from private sources is provided by no other county, officials of the organization point out. Without additional funds from the counties to meet the increased cost of living, services to dependent children will have to be curtailed.
