Closer, Closer

THE war has now come within 700 miles of the coast of Brazil, creeping closer, ever closer. Nothing the United States has done brought it there. The shooting, which everybody has been dreading, is now a fact, and it was not American shooting. There is a notable lack of excitement in American consideration of the fate of the Robin Moor, American ship torpedoed and shelled to the bottom of the South Atlantic. Today's world is not the world of 1915 when a German surface raider sent the William P. Frye to the same grave. Americans didn't like that at all. The world seems to look at these things differently today, and whether that is to the world's credit or not is another question.

More is at stake here than the cost of the Robin Moor. For weeks, probably, there will be exchanges of notes between the U. S. and German governments, vying over this and that question of fact, this or that point of international law. Yet the main questions at stake are very simple questions: Has the United States the right to send an unarmed ship, carrying no munitions of war, through shipping lanes far removed from anything generally recognized as a "combat zone" to South Africa, parts of South Africa being at war with Germany? Evidently the United States believes it has that right, or the Robin Moor would not have been where she was, carrying what she carried. Or has the United States no such right? Is it to be subjected to a "shooting war" if it believes it has, and tries to exercise that right?

Has Germany the right to fight its war anywhere in the world, to sink any ship bound for any port of any country allied to the British, whenever some sub-lieutenant in charge of its submarine considers its cargo contraband? In short, who shall define contraband, who shall define combat zones, who shall lay down the "law" of the sea? The United States is slow to anger today. There is no hysterical outpouring over the Robin Moor case. It would be a grave mistake for Germany to conclude from that that the United States, which has surrendered much voluntarily in restricting its trade by its own neutrality law, will necessarily surrender every thing.

The United States in 1812 and 1917, for instance, has shown an active interest in free use of the world's sea highways. It still has that interest, and it has means at its disposal to assert its own ideas of what that free domain must be.

Dr. Brougner's Services Start Here Tomorrow

Dr. Russell M. Brougner, noted evangelist, who will begin a series of special meetings at the First Baptist church here Sunday, will speak at the first service, starting at 11 a. m., on the topic, "The Non-Going Church and the Non-Church Goer." At the service in the evening, starting at 7:30 o'clock, he will speak on the subject "The Unfailing Detective." His sermon Monday night will be on the topic, "Five Minutes After Death."

In One Lifetime

ORVILLE WRIGHT gazed down the vast new motor plant at Cincinnati, so big that eight baseball games could be played in it at once, and his thoughts must have turned back to the little bicycle shop in which he and his brother Wilbur built their first plane.

It was only 38 years ago. They built their motor by hand, a clumsy affair of 25-horsepower. The new engine plant will turn out 1000 motors a month of 1700 horsepower apiece. People talk of the speed with which life is changing. Here, in much less than one man's lifetime, the whole matter stands clearly revealed. The flimsy little pusher plane flown by Wright at Kitty Hawk in 1903 has become a colossus which, turned to a destructive use of which Wright never dreamed then, now bestrides the world, the master for good or evil.

1,300,000 More Jobs

MANY men and women have gone back to work. But we haven't seen anything yet. M. J. Kane, assistant chief of field operations of the labor division of the office of production management, says that at least 1,300,000 more men and women must be employed in major defense industries before the year ends: 285,000 building ships, 250,000 building tanks, 100,000 making munitions, and 400,000 producing airplanes. There probably are not that many people available at the moment with the required skills. But before the end of the year many of those who are now in apprenticeships and vocational training schools will have begun to have such skills. We are just beginning to roll. Before the end of this year our industrial machine will be under way. Every minute counts.

versions in the eastern Mediterranean, such as the battle of Crete and the Syrian ruckus, to rush troops and equipment into Africa.

The Cairo dispatch practically says as much in somewhat roundabout language.

IN LONDON today, "well informed foreign sources" report that the signing of "some sort of agreement" between Turkey and Germany is imminent. These sources say Britain has been kept informed of the negotiations—thus indicating that the Turks are friendly but don't just know what else to do.

It is said the Turks believe that by signing a "seemingly innocuous piece of paper" they can relieve the pressure Germany is bringing to bear on them.

THESE sources add that the "impending agreement" (with Turkey) will leave Russia with a feeling of still greater isolation and encirclement and its effect consequently will be to lessen her will to resist German demands.

It is pointed out by these "well informed foreign sources" (whoever they may be) that there appears to be nothing in the proposed nazi-Turk agreement that would open the way for passage of German troops across Turkish territory.

FROM Finland comes an interrupted report (interrupted by the breaking of the telephone communication, presumably by the censor) to the effect that Russian troops are hastily leaving the Hanko (Finland) base on which they hold a 30-year lease.

Draw your own conclusions from that. The implication is that they are retiring in the face of German pressure.

THERE seems to be little doubt (although, of course, it is mostly guesswork) that Germany is bringing strong pressure of some sort on Russia.

One never can tell what one gangster will do when another gangster is pressing him, but the safest guess is that Stalin will knuckle under in the end—as he has done every time so far.

The service Sunday evening will be augmented by a musical program furnished by a male quartette from Eugene. Motion pictures also will be shown at each evening service.

Federal Employees Will Enjoy Wiener Roast

Leo Turner Keeps Title By Draw With Proctor

Leo Turner, middleweight boxing champion of Oregon, retained his title in a draw with Powder Proctor, a fellow negro, in a ten-rounder at Salem last night. Buddy Peterson of Independence, who fought a draw with Turner in Roseburg two years ago, was less fortunate last night at Hoquiam, Wash., where he was knocked out in the third round by Davey Ward of Tacoma. The Salem fight card last night also saw Young Nationalista lose a decision to Pinky Pinkston, while in another bout, Keller Wagner, the Salem heavyweight who appeared on the last bill here, flattened Jack McCarthy of San Francisco.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS: There is an ancient legend that an ancient despot, out walking one day hurt his foot upon a sharp pebble. He thereupon ordered his ministers to have the whole earth covered with leather, that his feet might be protected. Knowing the impossibility of carrying out the order, and knowing the dire consequences of failing, the ministers began to despair. Fortunately one of them hit upon a solution. After a few days he presented the delighted monarch with a pair of leather shoes. Thus he was in a measure able to fulfill the order of the king. We live in a world of sin. Society as a whole will not change, and there are sharp pebbles for us to tread upon. But by taking Christ as our companion we are safe. So we must watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation. Our Father, look into our hearts, cleanse us from all sin. Give us strength and courage for each day. Give us wisdom and understanding that we may face the problems of life without failing. Guide our wandering feet in the paths of righteousness, for we ask it in Thy name, who has promised to ever guide us aright. Amen.

Visiting Here—Miss Rae Rainey, of Eugene, arrived here Thursday to spend several days visiting her cousin, Rachel Dora, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Dora on North Pine street.
