No Stop Here For the Army Going North

THE troops of the 3rd and 41st divisions, now engaged in field training in California, will not stop over night here on their return journey as previously planned.

We shall miss the pleasure of having the young soldiers with us again. The experience of a few weeks ago when the 3rd division made their camp here...

As a compensation, you might say, for the failure of the great north bound march to stop with us, our own National Guard company, good old Company "D," is scheduled to drop out of the column here and spend two or three days at home.

Will There Be a Second Cantonment—And Where?

WE note with no little interest that there is beginning to be some objection up in the Willamette valley to the idea of locating a large army cantonment there. The brief news story yesterday did not state the basis of the objections.

In the valley, outside the cities, there arises another problem when a great army cantonment and training area is sought. The Willamette valley is fairly well populated.

These problems and numerous others are not new to the army. Quite likely the officers have had such things to contend with wherever large cantonments have been located.

One thing is certain with reference to the location of the second Oregon cantonment, assuming that the Medford selection is set and that there will be a second one. The army is obliged to locate such a cantonment where it believes it should be located, quite regardless of local wishes.

well. Believe NOTHING YET. It is far too early in the battle to take anything for granted—especially any developments as startling as that would be.

If the red army has found a way to stop these German panzer thrusts, it is a lot better than anybody can yet believe it is.

YESTERDAY (Wednesday) the Germans spoke mysteriously of successes "baffling the imagination" and intimated that details of these successes might be disclosed today.

Today the German high command's whole report on the Russian war reads:

"In the east, operations on land and in the air continued on schedule yesterday. After decisions fell in our favor in numerous border battles, successes in operations of great dimensions are beginning to show themselves."

That is restrained comment. It might mean anything.

THIS writer's advice is to jump to no conclusions. The battle isn't old enough yet. Remember that in all previous important German drives the news at the beginning has been encouraging but in the end the Germans HAVE WON.

YOU might pause a moment to pity the poor Finns. They are between the devil and the deep blue sea. If Russia doesn't gobble them, Germany will.

JAPAN is still on the hot spot. Numerous meetings are being held in an effort to decide what to do—whether to bite Russia in the leg or sit tight.

If you see the Japs jumping on to Russia, you can be pretty sure the Russians are definitely getting the worst of it in their battle with Germany.

LETTERS to the Editor

RECALLS FIRST TRIPLETS BORN IN DOUGLAS COUNTY

EUGENE, Ore., June 22.—Editor News-Review: I was interested in reading in the Register-Guard a few months ago of the birth of triplets to Mr. and Mrs. Crites, and today I notice a picture of them in the same publication. In each case there is expressed the opinion that these are the first triplets born in Douglas county.

My father, the late Samuel Handsaker, a veteran of the Indian war of '35 and '36, wrote a book called "Pioneer Life," which deals with early times in Douglas county. He crossed the plains in 1853 and located near Oakland. On page 67 of this book is found the picture of the Cannon triplets.

One of my father's characteristics was to "boost" Oregon. Accompanying this picture is the caption: "Who would not come to a country where no crop ever fails?"

I will be glad to furnish any further information to anyone interested, but these are the main facts. Sincerely, MRS. LUELLA HANDSAKER BRISTOW.

Beaver Boys State Progress Revealed In Daily Reports

Day-by-day reports on the progress of the Beaver Boys State at Corvallis are to be furnished by the ten Roseburg boys now in attendance at the camp, where they are receiving instruction in practical civics. The boys have been divided into five groups of two each, and each group is charged with furnishing one report.

Our group arrived at Corvallis about 2:30 p. m. We checked in and were given rooms in the boys' dormitory. Each hall is a county and each of the four floors is organized into a city. Before mess each city held an election to choose a judge and two clerks.

The morning program was the same as that of Monday. All boys from Roseburg are seated at the same dinner table, which makes it nice. We have a rifle instruction class in which a number of the boys are taking part. It has been raining today, so no outside sports. We had instruction in boxing and tumbling today. Today has been a busy day. We nominated our governor. We were given pins with odd numbers being nationalists and even numbers federalists. We have our own police officers the same as any city. Certain duties also are assigned each member.

We were awakened by the usual 6:30 bugle, took a quick shower, dressed and went to the field for the morning flag salute. Following we joined in morning exercises, which are never missed, and confidentially most of the boys are so stiff they can hardly move around. Breakfast follows exercises after which we return to our barracks for separate city inspection. Each county, of which there are three, is divided into four cities and each has its own government. After inspection is the first of two daily assemblies, in which we discuss election developments, news of the campus, sports, etc. There are four classes, starting at 10 a. m., taught by the Legion leaders of the camp and held to teach the finer points of a democratic system of government. Following the noon meal come council meetings by city officers. Those who are not on the council enjoy a rest hour. Sports follow, consisting of softball, volleyball, tennis and table tennis conducted on an elimination basis. The swimming pool is open from 4:30 to 5:30 p. m. Following supper there are meetings of the two parties, the

Defense Quiz

Q. How can I form the thrift habit necessary for me to buy many defense bonds, now, to help the government? A. The easiest way is to instruct your employer or banker to hold back a small fraction of your salary or other income. Even 10 cents a day and a dollar on your birthday will amount up in one year to $37.50, the purchase price of a $50 defense bond. Bigger savings buy bigger bonds.

Q. How safe is a defense bond as an investment? A. Entirely safe. The full faith and credit of the U. S. government is pledged for payment of principal and interest on these bonds.

Pageant Prelude At Eugene Calls For Whiskers

EUGENE, June 26.—(Special) The entire male population of Eugene is unshaven at present, and will remain that way until July 26, but it is not because Eugeneans are uncivilized. The no-shaving decree is part of the preparation for Eugene's famed Oregon Trail pageant, to be presented this year July 24, 25 and 26.

The pageant, presented triennially, commemorates the settling of the Oregon country and the old west by the worthy pioneers of the 1800's, and the beard is a necessary part of the re-creating process. A black-shirted band of "Whiskalantes" sees that no man shaves for six weeks prior to the outstanding celebration, with swift punishment dealt to violators of the ordinance.

A huge stage where the three nightly shows will be presented is being constructed at the Lane county fair grounds. The cast of 2500 dancers and singers is being organized under the direction of Hilbert LeCompte Moore and John Stark Evans, respectively.

The script for the panoramic epic has been completed by W. F. G. Thacher, professor of journalism at the University of Oregon, who has authored the pageant show since it began.

Returns Here—Fred Hamilton returned to his home on Blakeley street last evening, following the last two weeks spent in Eugene attending to business.

SERIAL STORY

LOVE POWER BY OREN ARNOLD

CHAPTER III

THE office clock showed 9:02, but Dr. Hale was unaware the thing existed. He was still dictating, walking slowly beside the windows where he could glance out at the night.

More often, though, he glanced at Carolyn Tyler; somehow her presence here was exalting. A subtle, delicate presence. A fragrance. He had never quite observed this phenomenon while with Leana Sorni, his feminine associate in the laboratory. Patently Miss Tyler was somehow set apart among the feminine gender as a superior—

His thoughts snapped back again to the business at hand. He resumed dictating.

"—wherefore it seemed advisable to interrupt the actual laboratory work and make this detailed report, lest some quirk of fate eliminate both Miss Sorni and me from this earth tonight. We are the only two human beings who hold this priceless secret. Moreover, the public itself is entitled to know what has been accomplished. As to what may be expected from this isotope, which

I have tentatively designated X-999, I will venture this much: "One—sort of tabulate it, please Miss Tyler— One: A five-pound lump of X-999, in only 10 to 50 per cent purity, would drive all of America's ocean liners and naval vessels for months without refueling, if the power were properly harnessed. One pound of the substance is equivalent to 5,000,000 pounds of coal or 3,000,000 pounds of gasoline. Two, in exchange—explosive power it—"

"Did you say explosive?" Carolyn asked.

"Yes, in explosive power, a single pound of X-999 equals approximately 15,000 tons of trinitrotoluene, and—"

"Tom? Dr. Hale? One pound to 15,000 tons?"

"Yes, Miss Tyler! It's unbelievable but true! One pound to 15,000 tons of TNT! I know it staggors a person to think of it, but—well, the language has no adequate words for this! History has no precedents. With X-999 available, the human race must revise its entire concept of energy and power, as applied to daily living. That is why I don't dare take chances on letting this precious secret be lost now that Leana and I have chanced to—but I must not digress. Put down that the quantity produced of X-999 in this laboratory has made possible the—"

He slipped back from his sudden intense conversation with Carolyn into his dictation drone chattering words with meticulous care lest he say neither too much nor too little.

It was past 10 o'clock before he paused again. This time he was at the window, and stopped talking for a long moment just to gaze out at the blackness punctured by distant city lights. It was a natural stopping place in his narrative, Carolyn noted.

She sat back wearily in her chair, and tossed her pencil onto her desk.

"I wouldn't want to be inquisitive," she began, laconically.—Dr. Robert Hale was so young looking!—"But I'm sort of curious to know how scientists get along without eating. My own lunch was 10 hours ago." She flushed with a little smile.

He turned to her, astonishment partly showing.

"For good sake, Miss Tyler! I—of course, of course, I am so sorry. Please forgive me. And please let me take you to dinner at once! Over yonder four blocks is quite a good drive-in. I often eat there. My car is—"

"You aren't through the dictating," she countered.

"I may work all night. Couldn't possibly sleep this night in any event. Come on, we shall go out."

The employee-employer attitude was by unspoken agreement, left behind, partly because Carolyn was so naturally at ease and self-sufficient toward him. She was not the giddy, peared person she had been when she started in stenographic work three years ago. She had already risen to a true secretarial job in the bank, and she had jumped at this eddy intruding position at the scientific laboratory because it had held even better promise. In short, she was a business woman with poise even if she were only 23. She could leave work on the desk where it belonged, and relax when outside.

SHE was so good at it that within a quarter hour she had Bob Hale himself relaxing. She saw that he was really a man who had driven himself unmercifully. She eased him to listen to music in the restaurant, and caused the number in which a dish of sea food was prepared. Once he slipped.

"Next move is to get this stuff far away," he declared, unhesitatingly. "I must think of some place where nobody lives."

"What stuff?" she asked. "The baked salmon?"

Dr. Hale laughed heartily. The funny little rhyme did him good, and he realized that just being with pretty Carolyn Tyler did him a world of good, too.

His racing thoughts, however, were suddenly interrupted. Leana Sorni popped open his office door and came out, glaring.

"What in the world happened?" she demanded.

"Nothing, Leana. I've just been eating and dancing. And I—"

She was plainly shocked.

"Dancing, Robert?" said she, incredulous. "And laughter, on this night of all nights? Have you gone insane?"

Then the blond woman, impressive in her anger and handsome in spite of it, turned to Carolyn with restrained fury.
