They Are In There Pitching

DURING the years there has been a great deal of talk about a park for the city of Roseburg. It has been a difficult problem to solve.

But the Eagles lodge members, noted for direct and efficient action, were not confounded by any of the problems and difficulties of providing a park.

The county deeded the land to the city some time ago with the understanding that it was to be used for a park and playground.

And while we are on the subject of the Eagles, a hand of applause please (and they have had lots of applause) for the Eagles Drum corps.

The Eagles do not indulge in very much horn tooting on their own account but they are right in there pitching and pitching for the good of their city and their county every day in the year.

temporary triumph for the Hundred Days.

Waterloo finished the Hundred Days and finished Napoleon. His exit at St. Helena was permanent.

NOTE this, please: As long as Napoleon WON UNFAIRLY France was FOR HIM through whatever of blood and suffering he led her.

Russia gave him his first setback, and France immediately turned against him.

He abdicated and went tamely to Elbe.

He came back from Elba and for the Hundred Days, while he was ON TOP, France was for him again.

Came then Waterloo and DEFEAT, and France turned against Napoleon for good.

A WORD here to Hitler: As long as you WIN, Germany will follow you through blood and suffering and death to ward whatever goals you may lead her.

When you begin to lose, LOOK OUT.

It was Russia, unable to stand against him in any single battle, that by her VASTNESS first weakened Napoleon. It might be Russia that first weakens Hitler. History often repeats itself.

It may be reserved for US, the insignificant and unregarded infant of Napoleon's time, now the greatest nation on earth, to put a stop to Hitler.

This much is certain: He will be stopped.

For centuries the world has seen-sawed back and forth between the ancient ideas represented by Hitler and his fellow dictators and the newer ideas represented by the nation that was born on July 4, 1776, but always the newer ideas have come out on top.

They will come out on top again.

SERIAL STORY

LOVE POWER

BY OREN ARNOLD

Copyright, 1941, NEA Service, Inc.

YESTERDAY Carolyn admits overheard Leana's conversation, but Bob prefers to forget it. Immediately they plan what is to be done with the remaining X-900. Carolyn suggests taking it west, hiding it in a cave. Meanwhile power lines from Boulder, Dan can be tapped for the laboratories. Strangely, a letter arrives for Bob. It is from Leana Sorini.

TAKE A LOVE LETTER

CHAPTER X

The message which Bob had had handwritten, and even the script gave hints of the writer's feelings.

"Robert, dear," the letter read, "I send this in desperation because I can write what I cannot say. Things have been so changed these past few days. You are utterly different. I hardly know you. But the worst is that you hardly know me any more, or you seem not to."

"Tell me, frankly, have I proved unsatisfactory to you in any way? For many months we have worked in harmony side by side, and while I hardly dared hope for such success as we have achieved, I know it to be far more significant than you realize. Don't you wish me with you any longer, Robert? Have I shown myself unworthy? Where have I failed?..."

There was more of it, in a pained outpouring.

Bob read with increasing distress. Somehow on paper her plea affected him more than her spoken words had done. In truth, he had listened to her rather absentmindedly, but if Leana were this upset—

"Oh, Carolyn," he called abruptly. "I must move fast. The plane for the west leaves in barely two hours and—Look, can you take one more letter? I have no idea she felt so keenly!"

The higher personal nature of the matter never dawned on him. Somebody had written him a letter, so in his mind it was logical for his confidential secretary to take a dictated reply.

"It's to Leana," he began.

"Leana? You mean Leana Sorini? Isn't she here?"

"Yes. But I'd better write. She wrote me."

Carolyn looked her surprise as "She is upset." Bob's voice showed infinite sympathy. "She is such a wonderful person. Carolyn I have been most ungracious. But she is sensitive and I don't want to embarrass her in the slightest. Ready?" Carolyn was ready, as he began:

"My Dear Leana: Your note has shocked me. That you had to write it at all was enough to show me up. Please forgive me. . . Paraphrase."

"Of course, underlining that, please, Carolyn—of course, you have proved satisfactory to me. More than satisfactory. You are still the outstanding woman you were when you came, even more so, in my estimation. Leana, it is just that I am an insufferable ingrate myself. I forget to show appreciation. I—"

"Look, Carolyn, I don't mean to be that way. A man just gets his confounded nose into something and forgets everything else. See what I mean? Now how can I tell her that? She is a delicate, sensitive—"

CAROLYN suddenly found herself in the role of father confessor. It was as if Bob felt he had to apologize not to Leana but to her. Moreover, it disturbed her greatly.

"You are not unkind, Bob," she said, gently. "You mustn't feel that way."

"But I do! Her letter shows what a heel I am. I—well—Leana," his voice resumed the distasteful tone, "I humbly apologize for seeming inconsiderate of you and I promise to be more careful hereafter. It is necessary for me to leave the city tonight on a business mission and when I return I—I will—"

He paused, his face serious. "I'll endeavor to make up for my shortcomings. I regard you as the one person in this world closest to me. I—"

"Did you say 'closest'?" Carolyn interrupted.

"I—yes. But you phrase it as seems best, Carolyn."

"Me?"

"I am not very good at words. But—all right, Leana, it is my one fervent hope that you and I can always be near each other. I pray that our companionship, as pleasantly and fruitfully started here, can endure through life. It will be—"

CAROLYN had looked up in consternation, so that he paused again. She hadn't meant to reveal her feelings but she suddenly blushed with a sense of guilt and distress. He saw the distress, at least.

"Please," he begged, "you write it, Carolyn. You see what I'm trying to say? I'm never good at this sort of thing."

"I can try, Bob." She almost whispered it.

"You're priceless. I've simply got to square this with Leana. I have no idea how discourteous I have been to her. I know I always was tactless, but—Look here, Leana really is tons. Know what I mean? She is?"

He paused to consider that

Carolyn said nothing. She was gazing at her fingertips.

To cover her feelings, she reached for the telephone directory.

"I'll call the airline's office for your reservation," she said flatly. "What city, Bob? Denver?"

"No. Somewhere in Arizona or Nevada. They have fewest people, wildest mountain lands. Say, Boulder Dam. You suggested that."

When the call was completed he tried again to resume dictation, but while his feelings were no less intent, words were even more elusive.

"Make it clear that I need her," he ordered, almost desperately.

"You—need her? To, uh—"

"Yes! I was just thinking. I had no idea how much I relied on Leana. How invaluable she is. We have accomplished much. We must stay together always, for the good of science and of ourselves. We have a debt to humanity. Besides, Carolyn, she and I—Leana and I—"

He was stuck again, but in a moment Carolyn murmured, "Bob, are you confessing that you love Leana Sorini? Are you?"

HE turned slowly to her, face strained. For a long time he just stared in abysmal worry and confusion.

Then he slowly nodded. "I—guess that's it," he rasped, barely above a whisper. "I hadn't thought . . . hadn't thought . . . you . . . that would seem . . . right." He was still nodding, looking off at nothing now. "To—gether—"

Months together here. We understand each other. We have been very close . . . The work, Carolyn, must continue. It must!

"Carolyn, you have to help me! I will pay you any salary, any price! You are brilliant in your own right. You can do things I can't. You have understanding. You simply have to help me with Leana, help me win her, show me how to—make love as a considerate man should! Carolyn, I—you simply mustn't laugh at me—I need your help now more than—"

But his secretary had not laughed.

He stopped because she suddenly stood up, then ran back to her own office cubbyhole. He saw that she had given way to uncontrollable sobbing. Her sympathy—or what he thought was her sympathy for his position—touched him. He hadn't meant to upset his lovely young secretary. Plainly, Dr. Robert Hado, underrated himself in anger, he was a fool around women, not understanding them at all.

(To Be Continued)

If public opinion demanded it. I suggest that a national drive against reckless drivers would constitute a useful outlet for the emotions of those citizens who are so anxious to save American lives that they are not only willing to make us appear as cowards in the eyes of the gallant Britons, but are doing their utmost to stir up political dissension at a time when all patriotic Americans should be united for national defense. We could all join wholeheartedly in such a campaign against carelessness and thus save more American lives than the war will take if we do get further into it than we now are. Very truly yours, EVELYN BOWEN.
