DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

St. Paul makes no exception when he tells the Philippians to rejoice, but rather doubles the injunction. Too often we allow our faith and our rejoicing to be conditioned by many demands and circumstances. Did you ever read what Habakkuk included in his catalog of disasters? Everything on which his people depended for their livelihood and physical happiness yet he could praise God after all those things were gone. That is the only kind of faith worth having. A faith that reaches out to believe that even if God's purposes for our good are momentarily defeated. He can turn defeat into victory; that if we could see the ends from the beginning all things do work together for our good. If we cannot see light beyond disaster, if we cannot answer the reasons for trials and sorrows, let faith take us soaring on her wings over and above all our disasters into the light of God's presence. Then like the prophet and the apostle we shall be able to rejoice only a faith which can rejoice in the face of loss and distress is large enough to meet our need. Amen.
