Eyes Straight Ahead

THE people of the United States have their eyes fixed on one objective—the defeat of Nazi Germany, which has repeatedly proved that in victory it would be a desperate menace to everything we hold dear.

People will shout at us on either side now. On one hand will come the cry, "Turn your eyes to the left—give your energies to aiding the soviet union, that great citadel of democracy!"

To this America will answer, "Bosh!" and keep its eyes straight ahead. On the other hand will arise the cry, "Turn your eyes to the right—let us now on those things which help to defeat Hitler; after all he now fights the great red menace!"

To this America will answer, "Bosh!" and keep its eyes straight ahead. Straight ahead lies the first order of business. It is to supply to Britain the sinews of war, the aid, the support of every kind that will bring victory over the man and the system which plunged the world once more into the fiery furnace of war.

Nothing else matters right now. The president promises such aid to the fighting Russians as can be given without hindering pledges already made to Britain, not because he thinks any more of the Stalin dictatorship today than he thought three weeks ago, but simply because that helps the straight-ahead cause, the defeat of Hitler. Any such aid as is given will not be on a basis of helping Russia, but of helping to beat Hitler.

Communists in the United States are not one whit better than they were three weeks ago, not one whit more trustworthy, not one whit more devoted to democracy or to American institutions than they ever were. Their policies now, as always, will be determined by what they are told is best for the Stalinist regime in Russia.

Russia itself fights today, not to destroy nazism because that system is repugnant to it. After all, Russia had no violent objection to nazism three weeks ago. Russia fights simply to save its skin.

It happens that that fight is serviceable in what we want all so—the downfall of nazism. So that fight will be supported, for that reason, and to that extent. It is along that line that the United States should continue to march forward, eyes straight ahead.

Where Religion Is Free

ALMOST half of the population of the United States now belongs to one or the other of 250 churches or religious bodies which flourish under our free institutions.

This church membership has been steadily growing, according to the 1941 Yearbook of American Churches, and the bare figures speak eloquently of the position of religion in a society where all men are free to worship God according to their science.

Despite occasional small frictions, these 64,501,504 members of 250 churches live, generally speaking, in harmony with each other, and with the 68,000,000 who are without such affiliation. Each of those 250 churches has an equal right to win new converts as it can, and most of them are doing it. Such a situation is one of America's finest contributions to civilization. Here, too, as in so many other fields, freedom is a priceless possession.

about the state of public opinion in Greece and was immensely relieved when Tyre finally fell.

In the 16 spectacular years when he was raiding Italy, Hannibal was sitting pretty with the powers that be in Carthage as long as he was WINNING. But every time he suffered a temporary reverse Carthaginian enthusiasm for him cooled.

When, by the process of wearing down without reinforcement from home, he began to weaken, Carthage DESERTED him.

UP to the last cast of the dice at Waterloo Napoleon was unbelievably lucky, but more than once he knew the touch of the cold fingers of fear.

He took a bad licking in Egypt, abandoned his army there and slipped through the British blockade back to France and got his fingers on the situation before the real news of his Egyptian fiasco became known.

He was frightened again when at Pultusk and Eylau the Russians handled him roughly, and this time he sent a courier to Paris with FALSE news of victory. Luck pulled him out of the hole with a victory at Friedland a little later.

What frightened him was the knowledge that France would turn against him as soon as he began to lose—as it did.

HITLER probably knows that as long as he WINS Germany will follow him through blood and death. But he must fear the moment when he begins to lose.

History leaves no doubt that for conquerors this is a DANGEROUS moment.

OUT OUR WAY

DiMaggio Extends His Hitting String To Fifty Games

(By the Associated Press)

The New York Yankees and Joe DiMaggio hit a peak yesterday in St. Louis, where the league leaders knocked off the Browns, 6-2. DiMaggio, in running his hitting string to 50 games in succession, did it with a vengeance—three singles and his 20th homer—and thus took command of the individual American league lead in runs scored, runs batted in, hits and homers.

The Yankees, with the Cleveland Indians idle, boosted their first-place margin to four games and, what's more, tied the Indians' 1941 league record of 11 straight victories.

In contrast to the Yanks' 14-hit slugging yesterday, the two other American league contests featured nearly air-tight pitching. At Detroit the Boston Red Sox sent Lefty Grove after the 300th victory of his memorable career. But Grove had the bad fortune to tie into Newsom on one of his better afternoons, and Grove and the Red Sox came out on the short end of a 2-0 count. Each pitcher turned in a six-hitter.

Another and younger southpaw, Edgar Smith, had better luck for the Chicago White Sox against last-place Washington Senators. Smith's six-hitter gave the Sox a 3-1 decision.

Like the Yankees, the pace-setting Brooklyn Dodgers in the National league relied chiefly on batting punch. They walloped the Cincinnati Reds, 12-2, for the second straight day.

The Boston Braves squared their series with the Chicago Cubs through a 7-2 triumph.

Seattle Defeats Beavers as Sacs, Padres Split Two

(By the Associated Press)

Seattle won its fourth straight game from Portland in the Pacific coast baseball league last night, cutting Sacramento's lead to nine games and giving new evidence that the 1940 championship team still can't be counted out of the 1941 pennant race. Scribner gave up only six hits, while his mates were getting left off Speese to make the score 4 to 1.

At Sacramento the coast league leaders split a double-header with San Diego, snapping the Padres' four-game winning streak.

After San Diego had capped the first game 4 to 2, Sacramento stretched the seven-frame nightcap to nine innings and won, 3 to 2.

San Francisco got by Oakland in both games of their double-header. Fernandez' circuit clout in the final inning of the first contest gave the Seals a 4 to 3 margin. A wild nightcap was called at the end of the sixth because of the league curfew, after the Oaks had exhausted four pitchers and San Francisco two. The Seals won, 7 to 6.

Los Angeles justified Hollywood out of the first division by nipping the Stars 6 to 4.

Picnic Announced—The Friendly Circle club members, their families and invited friends have been asked to attend a picnic Sunday at one o'clock at Young's Roseburg camp ground.

SERIAL STORY

LOVE POWER BY OREN ARNOLD

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE INC.

YESTERDAY: Leana sends a telegram. Meanwhile, preparations for moving X-989 go on. Bob has found an abandoned mine shaft in Tonto mountain, easily accessible. Carolyn accepts a telegram, reads its mysterious message, then discovers that the wire is addressed not to Bob, but to Leana!

PLOT IS FOILED CHAPTER XIV

CAROLYN'S eyes narrowed. "This proves it! And this opens the way for me!" She didn't actually phrase it, but she means that she could now really compete against Leana Sorni. The telegram, of course, was not explicit. Nevertheless it was evidence enough of treachery.

"Anyway, I didn't promise Bob to help him!" She suddenly recalled that painful scene when he dictated Leana a note. "He merely asked me to help win her. I never said I would!" With this telegram in hand she felt absolved even of the remotest moral obligation. Indeed she felt obligated to do exactly what she now had in mind.

Her initial flash of regret over having opened a private personal message was completely gone. Quiet anger rose within her. Hurling she revealed the message—its envelope had been too loosely glued—and took it to Leana's desk. Leana was across the compartment at the laboratory now. Carolyn went there, planning as she walked. She would have to think fast! The guards all knew her because she had hired and paid them. But there was the matter of door keys, and physical help.

Ken Palmer would do anything she asked. The U-235, Bob had said, would be in four leaden boxes totaling some 150 pounds, perhaps more.

"When will you load the boxes on the freight car?" she asked Bob, when he had a moment to spare. Leana Sorni was out of earshot.

"Be ready tomorrow morning. Tonight, really. But too much activity again at night might excite suspicion. Best to move as if it were simple routine, don't you think?"

She nodded. She saw the boxes and went gingerly near to them, with Bob. It was hard to imagine that anything so drab in appearance could be of such transcendent value and importance. "One man could lift one box, couldn't he?" she inquired, in casual tone.

"Oh sure. It's safe now, encased in the lead." He smiled tolerantly as if at a child, then showed her how easy it was by moving one of the containers a few feet and that was precisely what Carolyn wanted to know.

COME time later a west-bound freight train was moving at average speed across a nearby state. It was exactly like hundreds of other such freight trains, except that in the caboose rode four armed guards, carefully picked from those who had stood tory near the Schoenfeld Laboratory. They were dressed like railroad brakemen.

Dr. Hale had simply explained to the railroad authorities that he was shipping some valuable chemicals and had arranged for those four "caretakers" to go along. They would stay, in shifts, with the specially chartered freight car when it was shunted onto a siding at the remote village of Blair, Ariz.

Bob himself had thought to go along as guard but, as Carolyn pointed out, he could do nothing that trusted hired men couldn't do, and his presence on the train might arouse too much interest.

Dr. Robert Hale, Ph. D., was nationally known. If he accompanied a freight shipment across the country, newspaper editors would be sure to see a story, and the hideout at Blair would be overrun with reporters and photographers. Then, too, Carolyn suggested, if the shipment went without him, Bob could wind up his business affairs at the laboratory, and fly west with Carolyn and her mother, in time to meet the train.

Leana Sorni was not present to discuss the matter when the train left. Bob told Carolyn that Leana had been unexpectedly called out of town. Carolyn said nothing, but her pulse quickened.

The train rolled with routine smoothness for several hours.
