POET'S CORNER

(A tribute to Ethel Bailey, appointed chaplain of the Rebekah Assembly of Oregon, by Myrtle McAlpine, state president.)

WE'RE MIGHTY PROUD OF ETHEL

(Tune: "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles.")
We're mighty proud,
To shout aloud,
Of one we love so dear.
We think it grand
Chaplain to stand,
When grand lodge meets with us here.
We'll lift her hand in this honor,
Bestow our wishes upon her,
Chorus:
We'll forever plaud our Ethel,
Plaud her through the chaplain's chair,
Then she'll go high,
In our lodge's eye,
And in the Grand Assembly.
It's Myrtle that we thank
For our Ethel's place;
She's a very charming lady,
And will fill her place with grace.
—Lena C. Porter.

Shakeup Of Army Generals Involves Major Commands

WASHINGTON, July 17.—(AP)—The war department announced yesterday major shuffling of officers, involving 12 important changes in command.

The sweeping shakeup was revealed in some army quarters as evidence of Chief of Staff George C. Marshall's determination to vitalize the command of the land forces, the program he recently announced.

Or, specifically, it was taken as a concrete example of Marshall's recently disclosed plan to replace an air corps officer in complete command of all forces in an area where aviation constituted the principal defense weapon, an infantry officer in charge where land forces would dominate the defense and so on. This applied particularly, it appeared to the assignment of Major-General Frank M. Andrews, a veteran air officer, to command of the Caribbean area.

Major General Charles F. Thompson, now commander of the 3rd division forces at Fort Lewis, Wash., was transferred to command of the first army corps at Columbia, S. C., to replace Major General William E. Shedd.

Major General Andrews, now commander of the Caribbean air defense command, was designated to become head of the entire Caribbean defense command and the Canal Zone, including both land and air forces, on September 10.

General Andrews will succeed Lieutenant General Daniel Van Voorhis, who will return to the United States to assume command of the 5th corps area, with headquarters at Columbus, Ohio.

Another major shift was in the assignment of Major General Jacob L. Devers, now commanding the 9th division at Fort Bragg, N. C., to command the rapidly expanding armored force.

He will replace Major General Adna R. Chaffee, who has commanded the armored force since its inception, but has been ill for some time. General Chaffee has been granted sick leave.

Major General Robert C. Richardson, Jr., now in charge of the expanded war department bureau of public relations, was transferred to command of the 7th army corps, with headquarters at Birmingham, Ala.

Blending of Sheep Produces Cheaper Fur for Americans

By JOHN GROVER
AP Feature Service Writer
BELTSVILLE, Md. — They're blending sheep like whiskey on the U. S. experimental farm, and what they get is swank fur coats.

Distilleries use a little rare whiskey to flavor vats of commoner beverage. The U. S. bureau of animal industry is doing the same thing, using Karakul sheep for "flavor."

It happens that broadtail, Persian lamb and caracul furs all come from Karakul lambs. The U. S. fur industry imports 250,000 lamb skins a year. It would be swell if U. S. sheepmen got that money.

Trouble is, there are 10,000 or fewer Karakul sheep in the U. S. No more can be imported, because of prohibitive quarantine laws. There are plenty of common, mutton-chop sheep, but their wool doesn't make caracul fur.

So the problem of U. S. exports is to take that little drop of Karakul blood available here, blend it with common sheep, and hope the resultant offspring retains the fur quality of all-Karakul pelts.

Keep on Distributing
It's working out successfully at the experimental farms, where a flock of 500 fur-bearers is on hand already. Karakul rams were bred to Corriedale, Navajo and highland blackface sheep. The half-bred descendants didn't have exceptional pelts. They bred back to the Karakuls, and found the three-quarter-bred lambs sported just as good fur as the imported skins.

They're continuing the blend-
