Games, Grim and Gay

BY virtue of the thud of the punter's toe against the football in the autumn of this year 1941, Americans are still blessedly permitted to be interested. The football season, holds briefly our attention, while across the world people watch and play their parts in a grimmer game.

Does it seem irresponsible for a great nation to rivet its attention to the spiral flight of a deftly tossed forward pass, while there is being fought what may prove to have been the bloodiest battle the world has ever seen?

We think not. In spite of wars, revolutions, and all the tumults of the social organization, life must go on. No one can forget Carlyle's vivid picture of how in Paris, during the most shocking horrors of the Reign of Terror, thousands went the ways of their daily life quite heedless of all these things. The pitcher must go to the well, and the clothes must go to the laundry in the face of the greatest and most world-shaking events.

"Business can't be as usual," and life can't be "as usual" in these days. The overwhelming stark fact of war throws its shadow over every activity of man throughout the world. Yet man is so constituted that in the face of the most overpowering disasters, he grasps for such pleasures as he can, and finds them good. If British people who may, before any morning's sun rises, be bombed into eternity, can spend those evenings at the movies (and they do) there is no good reason why the people of the United States should not sit cheering in the stands while yet they may. Football crowds this fall may well be the greatest of history.

Get out into the glorious fall weather, then, and cheer your team. Try to put out of your mind for a few hours that other game that is being played with the heart's blood of men and women for a stake no less than the freedom of the world.

Its terrible, unsolved question, its innings not yet played, its outcome not yet determined, will be waiting when you leave the stadium.

Compensation?

JUST at the time when the American male adjusts himself with a nation-wide sigh, to the idea of girls without silk stockings, comes balm to Gilead. Skirts, in a patriotic move to conserve dress materials, may be shorter.

Though legs may be less glamorous, they'll be more in evidence than ever if this proposal goes through, thus making up in proportion what is lost by way of illusion.

As the dignified Ralph Waldo Emerson once observed in his famous essay on "Compensation": "For everything you have missed, you have gained something else; and for everything you gain, you lose something."

Coat Hanger Crisis

ANOTHER of the defense sacrifices that we face without undue concern is an expected shortage of those twisted wire coat hangers.

If all the wire coat hangers cluttering the closets of American homes could be collected, straightened out, and laid end to end, it would be a good idea. No doubt if the closet-cluttering wirework could be assembled and remelted into new steel it would be sufficient to build 480 tanks, 16 battleships, 25 cruisers, and a Swiss watch.

Sacrifice! Well, we can take it.

that is. In Quebec there are many whose advertising and merchandising signs are in French only.

TO the American customer or the customer from other provinces of Canada, English is spoken—rather haltingly, as a rule. But, especially in the city of Quebec, when the store people or the hotel people speak among themselves they speak French.

It is obvious that they THINK in French.

WHY shouldn't they? The province of Quebec was settled by French people. For more than a century they lived under French rule and under institutions that were wholly French.

It is perfectly natural that they should be French still.

THE difference between Maine and Quebec, however—or between Quebec and Ontario—goes far deeper than a difference of language.

In interior Maine, for example, whose industries are identical with those of southern Quebec, just across the line, ownership of automobiles is more or less universal. All through New England, including the interior of Maine, this writer did not see a single horse and buggy.

Almost as soon as the line is crossed horses and buggies and horses and wagons begin to show up on the streets of the towns and the country highways of Quebec. Not only that, but ONE HORSE wagons and ONE HORSE buggies.

There is apparently no such thing as a TEAM in Quebec. There is certainly no such thing as a two-horse wagon or a two-horse buggy on the streets or on the roads.

But buggies and hacks (the hacks being of about the vintage of the Democrat wagons of pre-automobile days in the United States) are numerous in the extreme. Outside the cities, they are practically the rule.

If you are familiar with the border between the United States and Mexico and the differences that exist on the two sides there of, you will jump at once to the conclusion that the people of Maine can afford automobiles whereas the people of Quebec can't.

In this writer's humble opinion, you will be WRONG.

The boundary between the United States and Mexico divides two radically differing economic systems. In Quebec and in Maine the economic systems are substantially the same. The forms of government are more or less identical—not only in theory but in actual flesh-and-blood reality.

And it is perfectly obvious that on the Quebec side of the line the people are just as prosperous as on the Maine side.

It must go deeper than economics or government. The racial traditions of those rural people of Quebec must be such as to cause them not to WANT automobiles (and similar evidences of ultra-modern civilization) as compellingly as the people of adjoining Maine and New York want them. It is certain that they seem quite happy driving along in their one-horse carts and buggies while autos whiz past. There is no sign of envy or resentment in their faces.

At least, that is as close as this writer can come to figuring it out.

U. S. Grabs War Goods Billed for Nazi Areas

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. (AP)—Vice President Wallace announced today that large supplies of essential war materials, consigned to axis-dominated countries, had been discovered at various storage points in the United States and would be requisitioned for this country's own use.

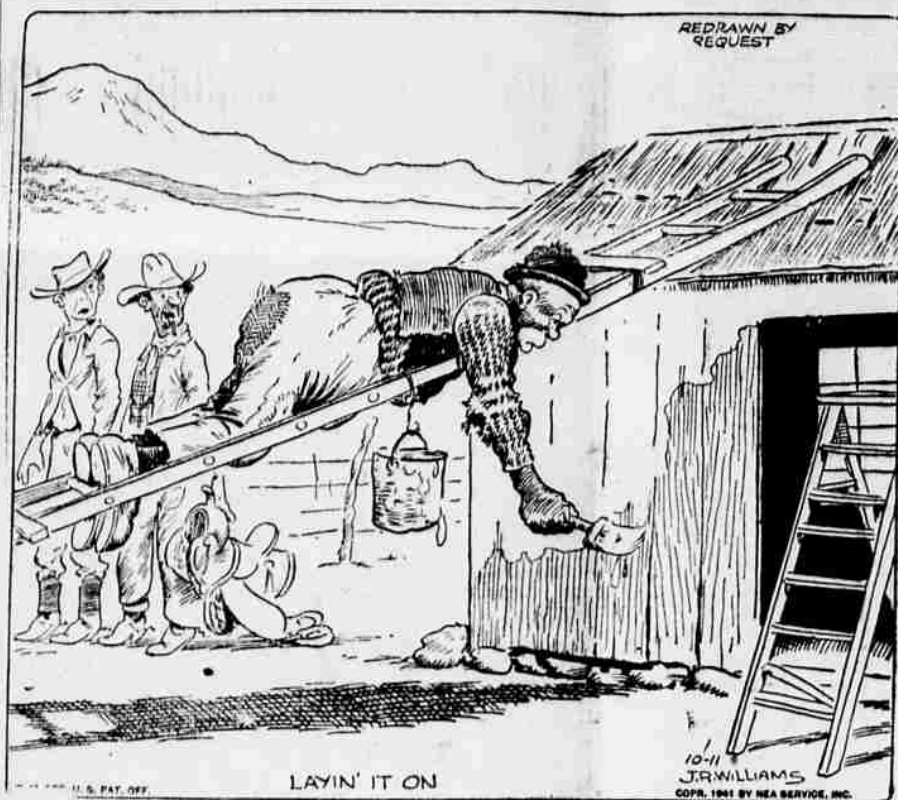

"A preliminary survey of the port of New York alone," Wallace said, "indicated that as many as 1,000 carloads of critical materials are involved."

He added, in a formal statement issued as head of the economic defense board, that such items as 500,000 pounds of aluminum, 700,000 pounds of tinplate and 1,500 tons of iron and steel products were discovered in one railroad yard in Hoboken, N. J.

British Trawler Bests Nazi U-Boat in Battle

LONDON, Oct. 10. (AP)—A British trawler, the Lady Shirley, was credited with shelling and sinking a German submarine in a spirited battle at sea with what the admiralty called a "larger and better equipped adversary."

The admiralty said the gunlayer of the Lady Shirley was killed by machine gun fire from the U-boat, and his place was taken immediately by an officer.

"After having been hit by several four-inch shells, the U-boat crew held their hands above their heads and shouted that they surrendered," the admiralty announced.

The submarine sank almost immediately and the Lady Shirley rescued 44 survivors, who were taken to Gibraltar as prisoners.

King George approved the award of the distinguished service order to Lieut. Commander A. H. Callaway, commander of the trawler in the engagement.

Daughertys Lease Their Business at Yoncalla

YONCALLA, Oct. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Luther Daugherty, who have operated the Kathryn's cafe and Daugherty's garage here for the last 19 years, have leased their business to Mr. and Mrs. George Marsters. Mr. and Mrs. Daugherty are undecided as to what line of business they will take up this winter.

Shops and Visits—Mrs. Huron

Clough, of Canyonville, spent Thursday here shopping and visiting friends.

DAILY DEVOTIONS
DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Religion is a personal reality, a challenging adventure within a man's soul. I need not speak of the history of religion or its varied expressions. Today our concern is with our own personal experience of religion and the inspiration and strength for daily living which we draw from the unfailing source which, as St. Paul said, we live and move and have our being. Men have always needed this close touch with the divine and we need it today. In a time of perplexity and world-wide confusion we must establish the altars of our fathers, place thereon the love and peace offerings of our individual devotion and kindle once more the sacred fire of the spirit. Religion has been the great dynamic of our social life. It has provided us with ideals, aspirations, social outlook, and the organization necessary to carry on the best traditions of society from generation to generation. Without them there would be a sense of loss and frustration which would lead to hopeless intellectual and ethical confusion. Men have tried at one time and another to overthrow the church and to satisfy themselves without religious institutions, but they never have succeeded for any long period of time, because religious motive is inherent within us, and religious organizations are essential to its expression.
