DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Much is being said and written about freedom these days. Freedom in its true meaning and application is ordered freedom. A freedom of life, liberty and happiness, which all may enjoy to the greatest possible measure without any restraints except those which bind each member of society equally, and without any limitations of action or conduct except such as are necessarily imposed upon each individual in order that every other person may enjoy a like measure of freedom. But, again, freedom is not unlocked license to do what we desire without respect to the equal rights and privileges of our fellow beings. The greatest joy any soul can possess is not alone the possession of freedom, but the love and the spirit of freedom to fight for it until the last spark of substance and the last spark of life has been exhausted in order to win and preserve freedom for others. A true love of freedom is sensitive to every assault made upon the precious heritage of freedom. Human government is a failure unless it grants liberty to its citizens. The life of man is a failure unless he is under the control of noble ideals which make him a free man. Christ wrote the sins of others in the sands but the righteous law of God on the tables of stone. Write the injuries you receive from others in the sand, but the benefits you receive in granite rock. Amen.
