plated extensions and service lines, will add another 200 customers who at present do not have electric power available.

A public hearing on the cooperative's application for purchase will be held here November 7 by the public utilities commission, according to an announcement by Ormand R. Bean, utilities commissioner.

Duplication Avoided.

Negotiations between the North Douglas cooperative and the California Oregon Power company have been in progress for several months. The cooperative originally had planned construction of about 185 miles of distribution system, some of which would parallel Copco lines. When negotiations were opened for purchase, the cooperative, Mr. Adams states, revised its construction program and eliminated about 60 miles of proposed construction to prevent duplication.

The Rural Electrification administration recently authorized a loan to the North Douglas cooperative in excess of $300,000 to cover purchase of the Copco system included in the contract and construction of a transmission unit between Eugene and Drain to carry Bonneville power, as well as the building of the connecting lines and extension necessary to coordinate the two systems.

John Roosevelt's Home Placed Under Guard

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 3.—(AP)—The secret service, which has the task of guarding the president and his family, has placed a guard at the Coronado home of the president's youngest son, John.

Young Roosevelt, an ensign, is assigned to the naval air station on North island, near San Diego and suburban Coronado, where his wife and 16-month-old son live.

Arthur N. Grube, head of the Los Angeles secret service bureau, confirmed a report that two men, apparently under the influence of liquor, had been arrested while attempting to look into the Roosevelt home.

From Washington came reports that guarding the president's family was a routine task and that there had been "absolutely no threats."
