DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Daphne Du Maurier in her book, "Come Wind, Come Weather," says you men and women in America may never be involved in the war in Europe. But the battle against human selfishness is one that you cannot pass by. Paul was conscious of the battle against selfishness when he wrote his epistle to the Philippians centuries ago. It is one that every person in the world has to fight. We know its existence all too well in our broken homes, labor problems and prejudices that keep us apart. What is the remedy? I begin to build a new world whenever I win a battle against any kind of selfishness in myself. Whenever God cleans up a corner of my life, the whole world is that much better. When I begin to be absolutely unselfish, I lift up the quality of living in the world. How often we are hindered in our spiritual lives by desiring a prominent place in life, and sometimes at the expense of another. We have to learn that God has a place for us, and we can only have joy and peace in our hearts by doing his bidding. Either I sacrifice my selfishness for the sake of my nation, or I sacrifice my nation for the sake of my selfishness. Let us learn the joy of serving our nation and friends unselfishly. Amen.
