POET'S CORNER

WAGES OF WAR

By Wilbur Williams
I used to clamber on his knee,
But that was long ago,
He seemed to think a lot of me
And oh, I loved him so.

I'd grasp his knee with chubby hands,
And wrinkle up my face and nose,
Then up I'd go and clamber round
All over him, from head to toes.

He never seemed to be too tired
To have a romp or play with me,
And how I missed him when he left,
And sailed away across the sea.

I can't remember how he looked
I never saw him anymore,
For I was just a little tot
When Daddy went to war.
