Senior High Parents Go to School

By MRS. H. B. CARTER

Tuesday evening classes opened at the senior high school at 7:30 p. m. for parents and ended with a lovely tea for all at a late hour.

With the assistance of senior high boys "parent-students" were first ushered to classroom one in the basement, where the processes of education were shown in picture form. From there the boys' workshop, under the supervision of Mr. Rawlins, was explored and the old blacksmith shop with its anvils and tongs was brought vividly to mind.

In groups of a dozen or more "parent-students" were then escorted to various rooms to receive instructions well prepared and interestingly given by teachers in the various classes. And so the flowery path of knowledge was trod once more by many, whose introduction to their child's new school was a long distance from their high school days—if they were fortunate enough to have had that privilege.

Time allotted for each period seemed short indeed, and occasionally one period overlapped another. School in the front office with "Professor Beard" racing through school policy, principle, etc., brought to the realization the magnitude of our school operation, efficiency, accomplishments and upkeep.

Parent-teachers rated well in citizenship, notwithstanding an occasional "picture" drawn on the board by the "naughty boy" when no one was looking. We learned much of the "whys" and "hows" of the chemistry and biology classes taught by Mr. Hiatt and Mr. Schwartzkopf, and the tying-in of the photograph work and camera club, under the direction of Mr. Hiatt. Senior high boys and girls are now getting in their best poses for their annual pictures, now being taken in this department for their year book, the Umpqua, for which Mr. Riley is the adviser. Mr. Riley teaches history and geography. Miss Euland even made plane and solid geometry sound fascinating. Miss Carnos showed us that "awful" bookkeeping and we hope now our balances will come out better.

ter, Miss Ricketts had typewriters in her room without letters on the keyboard. How times do change! In the world history class, Mr. Laws spoke briefly of the plan of study as well as intra-mural sports which they hope to develop. Mr. Laws is advisor to the newly formed Hi Y club. Mr. Davis and Miss Murphy showed us the intricacies of the lockers, and called our attention to the new basketball metal backstops replacing the wooden stops. We called on the Future Farmers, an exceptional department of work carried under the direction of Otis D. Rawlins, who has taken Homer Grow's place. Mr. Grow being called to government work. Our only regret in the library was that we could not read some of the books Mrs. Ramsdell called our attention to.

Before leaving the Spanish room, many were reading a few Spanish words—particularly those on a card. Other articles, Miss Hawthorne, informed us, were glued on her desk. Miss Anderson covered the field of debate and Latin courses while Mr. Ramsdell, the English teacher, said to our relief, that grades didn't count, about all we needed to do was to read understandingly. His group of real pupils write plays, direct and produce them. By the time we reached Mr. Melis' room we were so full of information only a few could understand the technicalities of his profession, and anyway, we had been in Miss Watkins' room where we were encouraged by the fact that her classes actually cooked and ate breakfast, drew house plans to scale and counted calories, and there we had seen the tea table beautifully set for the final visit. So from Mr. Melis' room we hurried there to enjoy a pleasant ending for an evening of school. Refreshments were served and Mrs. W. M. Campbell and Mrs. Clyde Beard poured.

We hope every parent there will come and bring ten others to the reception Parent-Teacher meeting given by the parents for the teachers Monday evening, December 1st.
