Bridge Crash Toll Mounts to Eight

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 5.—(AP)—A huge steelwork section of a $1,900,000 highway bridge being built over the Connecticut river lay in ruins today, and at least eight workmen were dead with the probable complete death toll set at 14.

Seventeen others were in Hartford hospitals, some of them critically injured yesterday when they were hurled 80 feet into the water as the structure crumpled after a big crane started to shift an 88-ton girder into place.

Hastily recruited rescue squads found seven bodies within a short time, and last night divers who sped here from the New London submarine base pulled an eighth from beneath the submerged 650 ton mass of twisted girders, wrecked cranes and splintered wooden piling.

The permanent concrete piers which have been built on the banks and in midstream were undamaged, but a "false pier," a wooden, temporary structure supporting the center of the 270-foot long section that collapsed, crumpled into bits.
