American Legion Auxiliary Activities

(By Mrs. Claude Baker) A congresswoman cast the only dissenting vote to declare war on Japan. It would not be our war. But if she did not have that right neither would you nor I have the right to live as Americans. The American Legion auxiliary was founded on war. During these years while the world war veterans were growing middle aged the auxiliary has engaged itself in cheerful pursuits, aiding in material ways those whom war left handicapped. Today we have a double duty. Today each auxiliary member must rally in the cause of defense. National Commander Lynn Stambaugh has said that we need 600,000 women and 1,250,000 Legionnaires so that posts and units may do the effective job now needed.

Mrs. Irvin Reigel, Umpqua unit president, says "We must do our part wherever we are called now. Let us put aside all minor things and carry our assignment to duty which we can fulfill. It is interesting to note that within filter station and motor corps personnel there are many auxiliary members. They know what war is. They are ready to give of their best."

Commendation such as that received from Mayor Langle of Seattle upon the perfect civilian defense setup which is Roseburg's does us all good.

This war is less than a week old. The reason for Christmas began two thousand years ago. Mrs. Reigel asks that each of you remember your child welfare gift and those for the veterans facility gift shop. Food for baskets, jello, canned goods and clothing are needed. Gifts for boys over twelve are especially called for now. You may leave these at the medical arts building with the elevator man until further notice. If an auxiliary meeting is held Tuesday night you will watch for that announcement.

Wouldn't some organization like to volunteer sandwiches or coffee for night workers at the filter station? If so you may call 455R. One man who said it seemed all he could do brought down a large box of shelled nuts for the women and smokes for the men on duty. The hours are long and this thoughtfulness is most appreciated.

Mrs. Ned Dixon, child welfare worker for the Department has returned from the trip she made to Sun Valley to attend the child welfare conference for those from western states and Alaska and Hawaii. The Hawaii women are stranded here, Mrs. Dixon said. No more meetings will be held at the army. Until further announcement Mrs. Reigel asks each one to watch the paper. It is possible that the Christmas party planned for this coming Tuesday will be held at the child welfare rooms and thence will not be a party! Red Cross sewing will be carried on each Wednesday from now on at these rooms in the medical arts building.

Do not forget those Christmas gifts. Call 688—if you do not find a place to leave them. Gifts from any one are most welcome. They will make some heart happier this dark Christmas. Do not forget these children even in such a time. They are already paying the price of the last war. Let us try to make this year less hard. May the auxiliary cast a word of warning. Let each one be careful that we do not malign anyone of another race. Among us are those who will pay for their birthrights a horrible price unless we guard our tongues. Until one in authority it is not seemly to speak ill of anyone. Emotions are apt to overcome our better judgment unless we take care. There are those of a race with whom we are at war whom our army has entrusted with high office. Can we do less?

Phone Calls Soar To All-Time High

Telephone calls handled by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company in Oregon Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of this week soared to all-time highs, with local calls generally being up between 30 and 40 per cent and long distance calls being up from 20 to 30 per cent, F. L. Crittenden, manager of the Roseburg exchange reported today.

The normal number of originating calls per day handled by the company in Oregon before the emergency was approximately 1,100,000.

In many exchanges the calling rate was much higher than the average for the state as a whole. In Seaside Monday, for example, calls jumped from a normal of 2800 to 11,461, an increase of more than 300 per cent.

In practically all exchanges, off-duty operators reported for work voluntarily as soon as they learned of the emergency, and scores were needed. Hundreds of extra hours were worked by craftsmen and others.

By Wednesday, the total number of calls, though still above normal, was down somewhat—a fact indicating that the public was beginning to take the emergency in stride. Many of the long distance calls were concentrated on long haul routes to the east, north and south. As a result of advance engineering and construction work, underway for several months in anticipation of just such an emergency, a large project was rushed to completion which added a large number of circuits to the east. Half of these circuits were placed in service Wednesday, and the rest will be cut in before the week is over. Other projects throughout the state nearing completion also will augment materially the number of long distance circuits available.

Blackout Lights Legal Only During Blackouts

SALEM, Dec. 12.—(AP)—It is illegal to drive with black-out headlights outside of blackout periods, Chief of State Police Charles P. Pray warned today. He said vehicles which must be on the highways and streets both during and outside blackout periods may use two spotlights outside the periods, and their regulation black-out lights during the blackouts.

Pray said officers would warn all persons who merely have cellophane light coverings, which are illegal at all times. Regulations require that lights be covered with heavy black material, through which a slit three inches by one-half inch should be cut. This slit must be covered by two thicknesses of blue cellophane or one thickness of blue lacquer.
