Brighten Their Christmas

CHRISTMAS is but a few days away. We will not go into the matter of the number of shopping days remaining. If your shopping is not done by this time there is nothing more to say.

But for soldiers and sailors who are away from home it may not be much of a Christmas. Our nation is at war, our homes and our very way of life are menaced by barbarous power-hungry gangsters on both sides of the world.

However, it has been suggested by numerous kindly citizens that many folks here might be able to brighten the Christmas of one or more soldiers who happen to be in this vicinity on Christmas day by inviting them to dinner.

Now China Is Our Ally

THE United States has always been sympathetic toward China. Since the earliest days, when China was helpless before concession-demanding European powers and a rapacious Japan, the United States has stood for its liberty and decency toward China.

China has been heroically resisting Japan's aggression for more than four years. Now we, too, are in her position, victims of the same insatiable ambition.

Asia for the Asiatics? Perhaps, as Japan has so long insisted. But the Asiatics will be Chinese, not Japanese.

Editorials on News

have been reported. The problem has been to get out a warning that can be heard and understood by all. Warning devices now in use are far from satisfactory.

THIS question is in every mind. Have enemy planes actually been over the Pacific Coast?

There is no flat and authoritative answer, but informed opinion holds that they may have been and MAY BE AGAIN at any moment. Present at Monday's meeting was an army officer who has spent several years in Japan.

There have been rumors of evacuation of Pacific Coast cities and towns.

NONE have been ordered. But again no one knows when such a thing may become necessary. Handling evacuations is one of the problems under study.

on the part of the population would be vitally important.

AND so it would be if Pacific Coast towns and cities should be raided from the air. The results of panic would be incalculably terrible. Panic follows surprise and lack of preparation.

It is prevented by discipline and readiness.

THIS is still sound advice: Don't get excited. Go about your ordinary business in your ordinary way.

Remember that if your boy in the armed service can take it YOU can take it. Be PROUD of the fact that you are sharing the dangers of war with him.

Remember that in the present emergency civilian leadership is being provided by your state and county defense councils. Be tolerant of mistakes they may make in the beginning. Give them all the help you can.

Cougars Trim Missouri, Huskies Down Kansans

SEATTLE, Dec. 20 (AP)—Missouri and Kansas state basketball invaders from the Big Six conference, will try to salvage something from the wreckage tonight when they trade Pacific coast conference northern division opponents who faced them last night.

Missouri was walloped by Washington State, 1941 western champions and national runners-up, 62 to 23, while Kansas State trailed most of the way to lose to the University of Washington, 45 to 32.

Tonight Kansas and Washington State play in the first game of a doubleheader and Missouri and Washington tangle in the finale.

At Pocatello, Idaho, Willamette university took its first victory of an intermountain region tour by defeating Idaho southern branch, 31 to 28. The game was close all the way, with the half time score 13 to 11 for the visitors.

SERIAL STORY BRIDE FROM THE SKY BY HELEN WELSHIMER

THE STORY: Associate magazine editor Judy Allen was congratulating herself on having her life all figured out—marriage with wealthy attorney Philip Rogers, handsome and dependable; a continued career; a complete forgetting of her infatuation for dashing and impulsive Sandy Amersman, aviation writer who thought she loved until newspaper linked him romantically with her own sister, Peggy. But Sandy is not to be shelved so simply. The day of her wedding she appears, and she comes with him, kidnapping her when she refuses. On the side to a nearby airport, Judy, hooded and gagged, is now sure it is Philip she loves, Sandy she despises. How soon would her mother, her father, Philip, start a search for her!

counting stars with you. Absolutely I won't! "Kind of you, honey. I know Philip's dad. Nice guy. He's one of a thousand or so who won't look at his parachute. See how I love you? Risking my chance at a future unless you'll come along."

"His voice was tired, not so triumphant, but Judy did not notice. Night had come, and with it a mist of rain. She fingered the thread in the wedding gown, found the injured lace and unraveled it again.

"If Sandy had turned his head just then, he would have seen such honest misery in the brown eyes, that he might have changed his course. Instead his voice was sober as he spoke now. The gaiety was gone.

"Judy, you don't love Rogers. You may think his bank book will look well in your library. Maybe his talk of stability looks pretty solid to you." The plane swung sharply to the west and he brought it back quickly.

"You think everything that is dangerous isn't right. Love, loyalty, faithfulness haven't anything to do with four strong walls and a lot of land. I'll buy you a house some day, a whole apartment block, if a cottage won't do. I happen to love you too much to let you trust your own impulses this time."

The mist grew darker. Judy was cold. There might be a leather jacket some place around. Her cheeks burned with anger as she started to search. Philip never would have left her without a warm outer garment.

"What are my own impulses?" she asked, still searching. "Oh, telling Skyways you were my fiancée and then starting west to find me?"

"You knew?" Her voice was almost a sob. "Not all of it, until yesterday when you came. Judy, do you think I'll give you up to anyone now that I know you care at all?" His voice was tender and the sky was vast and lonely. Judy did not notice, though. A little while ago Sandy had mentioned his parachute. He kept it folded like a seat cushion, she knew.

She had taken parachute jumps at the World's Fair amusement. She wasn't afraid to bail out. This lunatic could go to prison. Carefully she put her hand under her and found the packet that she wanted.

Following retirement from the police force in San Francisco, he moved to Roseburg and engaged in business here for several years. He was married here to Miss Dixon, and following their divorce, spent the later years of his life in Mexico, where he was engaged in mining, and in Pennsylvania, where he was interested in oil operations.
