a qualm.

"When you are thirty you'll acquire

A fortune. Yes, a barrel of gold.

You'll have whatever you desire."

I laughed and thought him rather bold.

Now I've been thirty for a year,

And yesterday my birthday passed.

My ship somehow did not appear,

With gold and riches huge and vast.

This morning I was thirty-one,

With dreams of fortunes left behind.

A new year for me has begun,

I've swept the cobwebs from my mind.

And then my eyes began to see,

A ray of gold from out the sky.

It radiated warmth to me,

And said, "I have not passed you by."

I looked about me in this light,

And saw my home a happy one.

It made me feel with keen delight,

That all my fortunes had been won.

I saw my family resting there,

At peace from all the worldly strife.

I thanked my God that I could bear

A son, and be a decent wife.

The fortune teller's words were so,

For I can confidently say,

My fortune's really made. I know

I HAVE a barrel of gold today.
