

OSC Basketeers Defeat Cougars In Overtime Battle

CORVALLIS, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Aided by the deadly 17-point shooting of sophomore guard Lew Beck, a veteran Oregon State college basketball quintet defeated the defending coast champion Washington State college team, 52-47, in an overtime tussle here last night.

Beck starred throughout, breaking through the Cougar defense constantly to sink lay-in shots and scoring the game-clincher in the final moments of the overtime.

The Oregonians took an early 15-9 lead but the Cougars reduced it to 24-23 at halftime and continued to hold with the Beavers until the Oregonians took a 44-40 lead five minutes before game time. Al Akins, Cougar forward, knotted the count with two field goals and each team added one more to knot the count at regular game time.

Beck shot a field goal almost at once in the overtime and followed by a free throw to raise the count to 49-46. The Cougars added one more point from a free throw but the Beavers stalled and sewed up the game when Beck scored again in closing seconds.

This was the Cougars second northern division conference defeat in three starts.

Beck, all-state forward while with Pendleton high, was selected most valuable player at the state high school tournament two years ago.

McNutt was next high scorer, with 15 points.

Amazing Hitting Power of Chinese Sets Japs Back

By DEWITT MacKENZIE (Wide World Analyst)

One of the most promising developments in the battle of the Pacific from the allied standpoint is the remarkable striking power and morale being displayed by the Chinese in fresh offensives against the Japanese in several strategic sectors of the long front. The outstanding example of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's new-born initiative thus far has been the disastrous defeat administered to the invaders at the important city of Changsha, Hunan province. This really great triumph is reported today to have cost the Japs 45,000 casualties already, and the mopping-up is continuing.

Such a grand exhibition by the Chinese, after five terrible years of standing off the far better equipped war-machine of the Mikado, certainly couldn't be anticipated. That makes it the more pleasing to see them now demonstrate that the Rising Sun has got to climb a lot higher in the sky before its rays carry light and warmth to all the spots where the Japs need them. The Nipponese have spread themselves far too thin for safety in their efforts to make a conquest of such a huge slice of the world.

Aid Bolsters Chinese.
 Because of the unexpectedness of General Chiang's strength, this column is getting inquiries as to the whys and wherefores. There is a combination of reasons which can be summed up thus:

1. Chinese morale naturally has received a tremendous lift through the acquisition of great new allies. That perhaps is the outstanding cause of the Chinese man's buoyant spirit, for there must have been many times during the long struggle against the invaders when he felt that he was the forgotten man.

2. As already indicated, the Japs are spreading themselves too thin and likely have been compelled to withdraw men and material from the Chinese front to meet the demands of the hurry-up job they have undertaken against the Anglo-American-Dutch combine. Thus we must attribute part of the apparent increase in Chinese strength to a weakening of the Nipponese in that theater.

3. But that doesn't give the whole story, for actually the Chinese are stronger, as they have been receiving war supplies in increasing quantities from the United States. These shipments have included badly needed fighting planes and bombers and, more to the point, a considerable contingent of American military pilots and mechanics have enlisted in General Chiang's army and have bolstered the Chinese air force greatly. Then too the Burma road, China's lifeline, has been improved by American engineers, and new trucks have been put to work, thereby increasing the flow of supplies.

Food From Home Gardens Now Held Vital to National Defense Plans; Grow Your Own Vegetables, Urge

By HOYT F. PAXTON, (Secretary, Men's Garden Club of America)

Defense gardens, producing at home the vital protective foods consumed by the owners, have now become a national necessity!

If the United States is to continue enjoying food abundance, escaping the production shortages and distribution tieups which have afflicted every country engaged in the war, then every family controlling a bit of fertile soil capable of producing home-grown food, owes a duty to the national defense to produce it!

This is the theme of a great campaign on which the wide spread extension organization of the department of agriculture has been at work for a year, which is about to go into high gear.

In the critical times ahead, every garden owner who grows food for his own family, will do four things, defense authorities assure us. He will:

1. Make a vital contribution to the national defense program.
2. Maintain and improve the family's health and nutrition.
3. Profit by offsetting to a considerable extent the rising cost of living.
4. By taking his own requirements off the market, he will release supplies and help keep down prices for those who cannot grow their own food.

Can Make Big Difference
 That small home gardens can make an important difference in the national food situation may raise questions at first sight. The explanation lies in the vast number of such gardens. The production of one garden is small, but 5,000,000 gardens, such as were cultivated in the war garden movement of 1917-19, pile up big figures. In 1918 they produced 228,000,000 pounds of food, according to the official history, which took no railroad cars or trucks, no market spaces or sales effort; it was harvested at kitchen doors, and consumed fresh or from cans by those who grew it.

Surpluses Gone, Prices Rise.
 Disappearance of all surpluses, and higher prices for fresh vegetables are considered a certainty by national defense authorities. Producers are faced with scarcity of labor, and much higher wages; while demand is being skyrocketed by two factors which Secretary of Agriculture Wickard in a speech at Salt Lake City, September 15, described as follows:

"The people of the United States need more of some foods, want more and have the money to buy more; and the government of the United States has committed itself to provide certain foods to the British, and in buying that food we are supporting prices at a level which will make it profitable for farmers to increase their production."

Since lower prices would curtail production and hamper the defense effort, it is the present policy of the government to put a floor under, rather than a ceiling over food prices.

Must Feed 10,000,000 British.
 Mr. Wickard said we have agreed to furnish in 1942 one-fourth of the food supply of Great Britain, enough to feed 10,000,000
