Storage of Wheat Should be Planned Now, Urge Given

Farmers can protect the nation's wheat supply against possible sabotage and at the same time make sure of a place to put the 1942 crop by planning now for additional farm storage space, Leo Sparks, chairman of the county AAA committee, has been informed.

The department of agriculture is advocating increased farm storage of wheat and other grains as an effective barrier against any attempts by enemy agents to destroy the nation's wheat supply. Wheat concentrated in large warehouses and elevators at centralized locations make ideal targets for sabotage, while wheat stored on farms over a wide area will greatly hamper any program of destruction.

Encouraged by the AAA loan program, farmers of this county last year constructed a considerable amount of new farm storage space, the chairman pointed out. But a great deal more space will have to be provided before harvest this year, he added, because of transportation limitations, lack of space at already overcrowded terminal warehouses and elevators, and an acute shortage of burlap for sacks.

Mr. Sparks advises farmers of this county to consult their local elevator and warehouseman to determine whether or not he can handle all grains promptly, and then take action now to obtain materials for construction of any needed addition storage facilities on the farm.

Cherry Diseases, Pests Controlled

A new combined spray program for the control of cherry leafspot, syneta beetle, and cherry fruit fly under Oregon conditions has just been issued as a combination recommendation of the departments of agricultural chemistry, botany, and entomology at O. S. C. Bulletins giving complete spray programs for fruit will be issued soon for 1942.

Recent tests over the past three years have shown that lime-sulphur can be made the basis for controlling all three diseases and pests if handled properly and combined with lead arsenate. Lime-sulphur alone will control leafspot, while the two in combination are used for the fruit fly and syneta beetle.

The lime-sulphur-lead arsenate combination is replacing the bait spray for fruit fly control in many instances. The one complication is that more residue is left on the fruit than when bait sprays are used. The ordinary washing used in commercial canneries removes the residue effectively, however.

The spray program for controlling all three of these diseases and pests includes four sprays of varying strengths. The first is applied at the time petals fall, a second when the shucks fall, a third two weeks after the shucks fall, and a final one four weeks after the shucks drop off. Explanation of the strength of sprays to use is contained in station circular of information No. 253.
