When Five Agree—

NO country ever did, and no country ever can, enter a war with a guaranteed, gold-edged, warranted blueprint in hand of just what life is going to be like after the peace.

War on the modern scale is a tremendous, all-out effort which so deeply scars and marks national life, that no country can undergo it and emerge unchanged.

Unless the war is won, it is not too much to say that America has no future at all. So winning the war comes first.

That does not mean that we should meet the peace without a thought of what is to be done then. Unpreparedness at that point might result in a "Pearl Harbor of the Peace" that would be no less disastrous than lack of readiness proved at Pearl harbor itself.

It happens that many minds are at work on this phase of preparedness. Five detailed studies have been made of the prospects, and to a remarkable extent they all agree on the general lines of what we shall face when peace returns.

Sudden deflation after the war, they agree, is a disaster that the country cannot and must not face. The vast industrial production facilities now being created must be used—to allow millions of men to come back from military service to face dark windows and smokeless chimneys is impossible and barbarous.

This implies some new techniques and views of finance, of economics, and of the whole social scene. It does not necessarily imply socialism or large-scale government domination of business. It does imply closer relationships, greater co-operation between business, labor and government, than we have ever seen.

None of these prophets has gone so far as to predict the actual pattern, but all make it clear that what we will face is a condition and not a theory, and that the measures taken will have to match the condition quite without regard to anybody's theories.

Parasites and Parachuters PARASITE is an ugly word, but it's worse in the midst of a crowded capital city. Much of the discussion on the President's recent homily on parasites has been facetious. But there is a germ of the truth behind what the President said.

Those who "never would be missed" are the society climbers, the people who go to Washington because "it's so interesting, especially just now," the lobbyists and lion-hunters, and all who go there without a serious purpose and prospect of helping to win the war.

the retail organizations of San Diego and Los Angeles, who see to it that every letter of the U. S. customs law is strictly enforced.

On a one-day excursion over the frontier you can bring back goods worth $5 at wholesale or $7.50 at retail. You mustn't have gone into Mexico for the specific purpose of purchasing these articles. You must merely have "seen them and picked them up" in the casual course of a visit intended for instructive study of the manners and customs of our neighboring nation to the south.

If lucky, you will be able to get loot to that value back past the customs officers on the American side. If not so lucky...

HAVING thus duly satirized the virtue imposed by former President Cardenas upon the once bawdy village of Tijuana, let us now offer a few tardily honest conclusions.

The real people of Tijuana—that is to say, those who live there and raise their families and make a livelihood out of creative toil—are in this writer's studied opinion BETTER OFF in these distinctly milk toast days than in the roaring old days when Tijuana was a hell hole known from one end of the United States to the other.

Along the streets of the town, you'll find a surprising number of good American automobiles bearing Mexican licenses. More than you'll find in any other border Mexican town this writer has seen. The rotting, dobe houses that stood on the outskirts in the old gambling days have given way to much better houses, inhabited by people who are obviously better fed.

In other words, the simple life of commerce, they are leading now is providing the common run of them with more beans and bacon than the high, wide and handsome gambling did.

COMMERCIALIZED sin puts easy money in the pockets of a few flashy panderers thereto, but as a rule TAKES MONEY OUT of the pockets of the common, everyday, run-of-the-mill kind of people.

ANOTHER conclusion at this point (a purely personal one.) Most Americans are inclined to look upon their Mexican neighbors as a shifty lot, by no means to be trusted. Getting caught alone on a dark street in a Mexican village would be looked upon by most of Uncle Sam's nephews as an adventure fraught with the gristliest peril.

This writer has found the general run of Mexicans a kindly, friendly lot—even in the border towns where providing what the average American away from home seems to want is anything but a nice business.

Wreckage Seen Thought That Of Missing Bomber

YREKA, Calif., Feb. 12—(AP)—The forest service organized a ground party today to strike into the lofty, snow draped Eddy mountains in search of unidentified wreckage sighted in the locality where an army bomber was believed to have come lost February 3.

The wreckage was seen by a miner named Erickson, who reported his find last night. A forest ranger, flying low over the scene in an air corps plane this morning, returned to say he did not think the debris to be that of a plane, but to make certain, the ground expedition was arranged.

It may experience considerable difficulty. The Eddy range, lying 45 miles southwest of this Siskiyou county seat, rises to 11,000 feet and at the present season is thickly blanketed with snow.

A search for the missing bomber, based on Hamilton field and northbound on a "routine flight" from McClellan field at Sacramento when it disappeared, has centered in this territory and southwestward toward Fort Jones since unverified reports were received of explosions in the Eddy mountain district February 3.

Aboard the missing army plane were Second Lieutenants R. J. Helderstadt, 22, of Geneva, Neb., and Walter V. McShane, 24, of Troy, N. Y., Technical Sergeant Michael Bittner, 43, of Memphis, Tenn., and Staff Sergeant K. L. Kirtland, 33, of Hagerman, Idaho.

William H. (Bill) Scherner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scherner of Roseburg, has been promoted from private first class to sergeant in the U. S. army air corps, according to word received here today. He enlisted in the air corps April 3, 1941, and is now in the basic flying school at Moffett field, Calif.

Get Married For Longer Life, Is Lesson of Figures

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE AP Science Editor NEW YORK—Get married, men. If you want to increase your chances of living beyond 40. If you are a widower under 40, you'll have to get married again.

As an example, the statistical bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company says at age 40 the New York state death rate for males is 6.08 per 1000 among the married.

For bachelors, it's more than double, 12.84. The widowers are still worse off, at 13.15. For women, marriage doesn't make such a difference. At the same age—40—the married women have a death rate of 5.34; spinsters 6.07, and widows 6.70.

Analyzing the possible reasons, the statisticians find a very striking increase in tuberculosis deaths among the single as against the married. Alcoholism kills more single than married. The single even have more fatal accidents.

As for the reasons why, the statisticians make a guess that the married man has more to live for, feels he must go on, and is probably more careful or more determined, or both.

Back to Work—E. E. Wimberly has returned to his office, following a few days' illness at his home on North Jackson street.
