Steady!

STUDENTS of German psychological warfare, like Arthur Upham Pope, chairman of the Committee for National Morale, believe that German authorities deliberately try to hold German emotions at a level, avoiding too great exultation at victory, too great depression at defeat. These violent shifts of emotion are bad for a people, they believe.

We do not here seek to play upon the people as upon an organ. But it is obvious that there is something to the German contention. Now we are going through a bitter time of disaster. It will not do to be too greatly depressed, so that the tiniest success appears a great victory. We must look at this thing the long way, for it will be a long war. We must grimly, relentlessly, prepare for the day when we shall have our innings.

Contrast

WITH the Japanese battering at the gates of the city, cans draw up to Singapore's famous Raffles hotel to discharge tea-china guests, reporters say.

With the Japanese thousands of miles away, and the scars of the Pearl harbor attack largely healed, the famous Royal Hawaiian hotel at Honolulu has been turned over to the navy as a recreation center for sailors, marines and soldiers.

This is not said critically. Britain has paid and will pay sorely for her "long weekend" mind. An end is being made to all that in the empire, as it has been ended in the British Isles themselves.

We must end it here, and there are signs that we are ending it, before the price grows even higher than the high price we have already paid.

Ungdomsfylking

NOT the least tragic of the many tragic things about the Hitler regime is the way it takes young children, places their minds in a straitjacket, and gives them no choice but to grow up into mental cripples.

Hitler is trying to do the same thing in Norway, and presumably in all the other countries he has conquered. In Norway, the Quisling "government" has "enacted a law" to the effect that all children between the ages of 10 and 18 must belong to a Hitler youth organization called "Ungdomsfylking." Belonging to an organization with a name like that is a cruel and unusual punishment in itself, though presumably less severe on that account in Norway where it can at least be pronounced. The essential cruelty remains, however, in forcing little children to subject themselves to the indoctrination of a barbarous and stifling organization of conquering strangers.

Chalk Up One for the FBI

THERE seems to be some difference of opinion about whether the FBI measures up to its press-notice reputation in actual performance.

But faith in the organization begins to be restored when one reads Laura Ingalls' testimony that on three occasions she offered the FBI her services as a counter-espionage agent, and that three times the FBI turned her down.

Miss Ingalls, an amateur flyer who had succeeded in making quite a public record for herself as an admirer of Hitler and Hitlerism even before the war came, was very distinctly not the type. It is reassuring to feel that somebody in the FBI knew it.

hands and getting ready for their next big smash, which will be at the Dutch island of Java.

From Bataan the news tells only of new enemy air units, new enemy artillery, new enemy troops landing. (The Japs have the planes, the guns and the ships to get them where they are needed.)

MacArthur and his men have courage and stamina and willingness to die in their tracks, but they lack sufficient weapons.

IF Java falls, what next? Australia? Maybe. The Australians at least expect it.

MEANWHILE, however, note that Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek and Mahatma Mohandas Gandhi meet in Calcutta. At their meeting, Gandhi squats on the floor, wrapped in his sheet. They talk for an hour and 20 minutes and then knock off for lunch.

ONE doesn't need to be told what they are talking about.

Gandhi isn't using the full strength of the numerous Indian party that is demanding independence from Britain. He and his followers want independence NOW. Britain answers: "Wait till the war is over."

The British answer may be the right one. But the fact remains that India isn't using the full strength of which she is capable. Chiang Kai Shek is in Calcutta to convince Gandhi (if he can) that NOW is the time to use ALL of India's strength to STOP JAPAN.

SINGAPORE has fallen. Suppose Java falls and the East Indies Dutch are beaten. Suppose MacArthur is overpowered.

Where next will Japan head for?

It may be Australia, but it is quite evident that Chiang Kai Shek at least looks for the Japs to strike on into India.

Need of Timber Conservation Is Again Emphasized

Federal Control of Cutting On Privately-Owned Land Is Urged by Forest Service

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20—(Wide World)—With war efforts making new demands on the nation's supply of timber, the forest service today issued a warning of the need for conservation.

The service contends that two steps must be taken: First—government ownership and management of much more forest land, and second—government regulation of lumber and wood cutting on privately-owned land.

In giving out the annual report of the service, an official remarked: "It contains the same old story. We've been saying this year after year."

"Even so," he added, "we feel it a story that should be told and retold. I admit that we get discouraged sometimes; we wonder if people aren't adopting toward our forestry resources the characteristic American policy of waiting until the horse has been stolen before locking the barn door."

Cutting rapidly increased. The report, signed by acting chief Earl H. Clapp, declared: "Defense demands have led to greatly increased cutting in many forest regions. This is depleting

Harley Watson, Son Both Register for War Draft

Harley Watson and his son, Gordon, former residents of Roseburg, registered simultaneously for selective service Monday at Seattle, according to an item appearing in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Harley Watson was a member of the Roseburg national guard company prior to World war I and served on the Mexican border preceding the declaration of war with Germany. He went overseas with the 69th artillery. Following the war he made his home here for a number of years while employed with the H. S. French Transfer company, and also served as city fire chief. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Watson, who reside on the Dixonville road.

The Seattle newspaper quotes Watson as being anxious to return to military service. He now is employed in Seattle as dock foreman for Consolidated Freightways.

Nor can voluntary self-regulation be expected to function in the face of such financial pressures and boom markets as have led to quick liquidation of most of the privately-owned forest resources.

The report emphasized, that an increasing number of "far sighted leaders" among forest owners were adopting good forest practices, but added that most private owners "still cling to destructive cutting."
