Tire Life Budgeting Plan Given Car Owners

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—(AP)—The Rubber Manufacturers association urges the American motoring public not to drive a mile that is unnecessary and, on the assumption there will be no new tires till after the war, budget the estimated life of its tires this way:

Each family to analyze its car's use for a typical month, itemizing all regular and special trips taken and the mileage consumed, and then compare this with the estimated miles of use remaining in the tires which should mean a drastic reduction in use of the car during the coming months.

If the estimated remaining life in the family car's tires is about 10,000 miles, the association said, then their use would have to be limited to about 2,000 miles yearly, which would mean only 166 miles a month or about 40 miles a week—if the family wanted to keep the car operating a few more years.
