No Loafers Listed

EVENTUALLY every man registered for selective service will get a questionnaire asking him what he can do. As every one knows the battle of production must be won before the battles of Bataan, of the Atlantic, of Australia can be marked down as victories. Therefore, the government must know what we can do.

This four-page questionnaire carries many queries and a list of occupations from airplane fabric worker to wire drawer. Then there are such relatively unknown jobs as armor, habbit, core maker, dynamic balancer, and tube bender. It takes all these and many more kinds of workers to win the war, but nowhere in the list will you find loafer, orator, drugstore cowboy or curbstone colonel. But there is one square reading "do not have a job and am not looking for work."

This data fills the files of the United States employment service and the national roster of scientific and specialized personnel so that we know just where we stand in regard to skilled workers and professional people. The government now has no power to shift workers to jobs where they might be more useful although some members of congress are beginning to mention the word "compulsion."

Naturally, most of the people and most of congress shy away from any sort of compulsory work service and if persuasion and patriotism can do the job, there will be no commands for a Paducah plumber to leave home and hearth and pull up stakes for San Diego.

But if the war goes against us, if we begin losing the battle of production, if serious shortages develop in some trades and skills, if there are too many bricklayers in Omaha and not enough in Norfolk, then something stronger than words may be used.

This questionnaire will be a complete file on every male between 18 and 65 when completed and will serve as an invaluable roster of just who can do what, how long they have been doing it and where they can be found.

Compilation of the list and its intended use once more define the difference between our side and our way of life, and the whip-cracking policies of our foes. Here we ask workers what they can do, and ask them to take a job where their labor will be of greatest benefit in the war effort.

In the axis countries, they are told what to do and when to do it. To refuse is another way to commit suicide. Realizing this, our workers and professional men cheerfully will do as right by the questionnaire and its possibilities as those fighting our bloodier battles are doing.

Robin Hood Rides Again

WHILE we ring the ratters, and rightly so, with praise for General MacArthur, the Kelly's, O'Hares and other heroes, there fights in the hills and mountains of Yugoslavia a little band which is keeping an estimated 400,000 axis soldiers up nights. The Robin Hood army of Gen. Draja Mihajlovich reportedly has killed 50,000 German and Italian soldiers since that Balkan nation was "overwhelmed."

This guerrilla battle of the Balkans might be almost as important as any now in progress, since the more axis troops sent to keep the wild Serbs from a general uprising, the fewer men Hitler can send to the Russian front. Besides, the Yugoslavs are setting a fine fighting example for the other occupied countries—and for America. Such fighters undoubtedly will sit closer to the head of the peace conference table than some nations which took it lying down.

in Norwegian waters, preparing for a surface raid on the Russian supply line.

WHAT the Japs have really decided to do only their own high command knows, but during the week units of the Japanese navy were reported operating in the Indian ocean.

The Rome radio reports that a major British naval force was sighted en route to the Indian ocean within 24 hours after the Jap naval units were sighted. Moving, that is, to check the Japs.

THE Japs are gathering heavy forces in the islands north of Australia, presumably for an attack in force. Wide-ranging American and Australian planes have been pounding these concentrations—chiefly in New Guinea and on the island of Timor.

Again checking the opponent's move.

IN the Mediterranean the supremely important British fortress of Malta, which threatens axis communications between Italy and Africa, must be kept supplied. The axis gets wind of a British supply expedition and attacks it. The British counter-attack the attackers.

More checking moves.

THE British apparently get their convoys into Malta thus providing that strategic island base with needed ammunition, food, reinforcements, etc., and insuring continued trouble for the axis.

A British "commando" force raids the German submarine base at St. Nazaire, at the mouth of the Loire river—seeking to put it out of commission as Zebrugge was put out of commission during the first World war.

As nearly as can be determined from early dispatches, the Germans had got wind of the raid and were waiting for the raiders. But the attempt to bottle up the submarines at St. Nazaire seems to have achieved success, according to British claims.

It was only a minor checking operation.

ALL this sparring and checking is in preparation for the heavier fighting that will follow as the real strategy of this big war year of 1942 begins to unfold.

Soon we shall know what Hitler plans to do—or try.

Soon Japan must disclose her real objectives.

This lull in the news is only the lull that comes before the storm. We can expect the storm to be severe when it breaks.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 31.

The general public does not yet know, and only a few of the canneries of the northwest are aware that canning, one of the great resources of the area, is to be hard hit. Briefly, the war production board has a program of trying to make a normal one year's supply of tin stretch over five years. WPB realizes that this will cause inconvenience and much loss to many people; but that is the plan.

Most of the tin supply for the United States came from the Dutch East Indies. It was supposed that although there might be a temporary interruption of supplies, the Japanese would be shortly disposed of and tin would again flow. Unfortunately, the Japanese swarmed in and captured the Dutch East Indies and now no tin is expected from that source until after the war is over. Sometime before the war is over it is hoped that a smelter will be operating on tin ore from Bolivia, the smelter having been located in Texas, although the engineers had recommended Tacoma.

Despite this possible relief from Bolivia, WPB is not placing too much confidence in it and declares that the outlook for an adequate tin supply during the next few years is so bad that the tendency will be to tighten the restrictions rather than to make them more liberal.

War production board proposes telling what size cans can be used. It recognizes that the small cans are more convenient for the needs of consumers but small cans require proportionately much more tin plate per ounce of contents than large cans. As between accommodating the consumer and conserving tin plate, WPB is for the latter. Canneries with army contracts will fill the order by using extra large containers.

Dehydrating Requested.

Whenever there are fruit or vegetables in the northwest there are packing plants to process the product. Selling berries, cherries, beans, peas, etc., to the canneries is the regular business of the farmers and orchardists. Allowed, but one year's tin supply to take care of the pack for at least five years is expected to have an unfavorable reaction upon groves of vegetables and fruit. Unless the canneries supplement the tin with other types of container, such as glass jars, they may buy only one-fifth of the usual amount of foodstuff. In 1942 and 1943, et sequia, the farmers are requested to break all records producing food, as they must feed, in addition to the United States, millions in other countries. Normal way of preserving and handling this food would be through packing plants. WPB is urging that surplus food be dehydrated, such as beans. And it may be observed that WPB has put the kibosh on canned pork and beans, canned soups and other items that the consumer is expected to do without.

In about 60 days the general public and the farmers will discover what the war is doing to an important industry, and housewives will have less use for a can opener.

Office of price administration expects to ration soap, the same as sugar. The soap cards may not come before the end of the current year, but the rationing is certain in a long war.

Episcopal Children to Be Seen in Pageant

In connection with the regular Wednesday evening service at St. George's Episcopal church, the children of the church school will present a pageant of the season's of the Christian year, according to an announcement made today by Mrs. R. R. Brand and Mrs. Theo Bond, who are in charge of the program. The service will begin at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. Lynn Beckley will act as organist.

Called Here—Mrs. M. R. Woodworth (Margaret Sorley) and son, Bruce, of Bremerton, Wash., and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sorley, of Portland, came to Roseburg this week to attend the funeral of Mr. Sorley's and Mrs. Woodworth's step-father, T. F. Patterson. Mr. and Mrs. Sorley left yesterday for their home in Portland and Mrs. Woodworth and Bruce remained here for the rest of the week, and upon their return to Bremerton they will be accompanied by Mrs. Patterson, who will visit there indefinitely. Both Mr. Sorley and Mrs. Woodworth are former residents of Roseburg.

DAILY DEVOTIONS
DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Alas! and did my Saviour bleed,
And did my Sovereign die?
Would He devote that sacred head
For such a worm as I.

Was it for crimes that I have done,
He suffered on the tree?
Amazing pity grace unknown
And love beyond degree.

Well might the sun in darkness hide,
And shut his glory in,
When Christ the great Redeemer died
For man the creature's sin.

Then might I hid my blushing face
While His dear cross appears;
Dissolve my heart in thankfulness,
And melt mine eyes to tears.

But drops of grief can ne'er repay
The debt of love I owe;
Here Lord I give myself away
'Tis all that I can do.
Amen.

Senate Votes to Double Wages of Army Privates

WASHINGTON, Mar. 31.—(AP)—Legislation increasing monthly pay of army "buck" privates from $21 to $42 and making adjustments in pay and allowances for other personnel in the army, navy, marine corps, coast guard, geodetic survey and public health service, was passed yesterday by the senate.

The measure, which now goes to the house, was designed to establish equality of pay in the ranks of the army and navy, by adjusting the base remuneration of all personnel up to and including second lieutenants. Senator Johnson (D-Colo.), manager for the bill, said the additional cost to the government, based on the size of the army last January 1, would be $282,412,000 annually. Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky pointed out, however, that the army, which would obtain most of the increases, was growing rapidly. He added that the annual cost might become much greater than Johnson's estimate.

Under terms of the measure, enlisted men and selectees would start drawing $42 monthly pay when they were inducted into the army, instead of receiving only $21 for the first four months. Under the present system, these men receive $30 a month thereafter and an additional increase of $10 monthly after a year's service.

The latter addition would be abolished under the new bill and longevity for enlisted men placed upon the basis of a 5 per cent increase in pay for each three years of service, the system now employed for officers.

Increases for enlisted men under the bill would make their pay range from $42 for the lowest rank to $138 for the highest—master sergeant in the army or chief petty officer in the navy. The present pay scale runs from $21 to $126.

The basic pay of second lieutenants would be boosted from $1,500 to $1,800 annually and they would be given an increase in subsistence allowances. Adjustments in subsistence and rental allowances would be made also for officers in the higher grades.
