HUNDREDS of marchers, parading with bands, drum corps and massed flags brought to Roseburg Monday a festive spectacle.

Perhaps the cadence of the civilian marchers lacked the snap and precision of that produced by the marching feet of those boys who are now in the battle areas.

Parading primarily to pay tribute to the men of the armed forces on Army day, the civilian defense workers gave ample demonstration of the spirit of the American public today in support of the all-out victory effort.

The men and women, boys and girls who marched in that procession were voluntary workers, none was drafted, none was forced into the service in which he or she now is engaged.

Included with those marchers were men and women who occupy lonely observation posts hour upon hour, listening for the sound of an airplane.

Serving day after day in all kinds of weather, yet hoping they will never have to perform the duty for which they were appointed, that of reporting the presence of an enemy plane.

Included, too, were a number of men who devote many hours to listening for the sound of a telephone bell that they hope never will ring a telephone that will signal warning of an air raid.

Among the marchers were hundreds of men and women trained for emergencies that they hope will never happen.

But every man, woman and child in that parade was a person trained and ready for the emergencies the future may bring.

They probably never will receive formal recognition for what they are doing and what they will continue to do.

There probably will be no medals cast in their honor. But each will have the satisfaction of responsible service ably discharged on behalf of the government of which each is proud to be a citizen.

The German armies and they haven't cracked the German defense front.

Hitler isn't licked. He still has plenty of striking power.

WE learn that American flying fortresses are now operating from bases in India.

The dispatches tell us they have attacked Jap naval forces in the Bay of Bengal and left a Jap cruiser and a transport in flames and probably damaged two other Jap ships.

They have bombed Jap bases in the newly occupied Andaman islands.

American air power is beginning to make itself felt.

THE navy gives us a picture of our naval losses to date as compared with the other fellow's.

So far, the navy summary announces, we have lost (sunk and gone) a total of 25 warships—ten destroyers, one battleship, three submarines, one cruiser, one aircraft tender, two coast guard vessels, two tankers, one target ship, one cargo ship, one gunboat and two miscellaneous type vessels.

Jap naval losses to date (in- flicted by the U. S.) are given as 30 warships, including one battleship, six cruisers and two aircraft carriers.

During this period we have launched 16 destroyers, one battle-ship, two cruisers, two aircraft tenders and "a number of other vessels." We have under construction (among lesser ships) 17 battleships, 12 aircraft carriers and 35 cruisers.

JAP naval launchings since the war began are not known. The Jap construction program is not known. But it is generally assumed that the rate at which the Japs can build is only a fraction of ours.

THESE are hopeful figures—as they are intended to be. The navy gives them out to cheer us up. They back up the contention that if we put into it everything we have we can't lose.

But let's never lose sight of the fact that to be SURE of winning we've got to put into it EVERY-THING we have.

This war is for keeps.
