Keep Punching

PROSPECT for a quick end to the war has been the subject of widespread discussion during the past few days, spurred, doubtless by much wishful thinking and the expressed opinions of some commentators, officials and armchair strategists. Numerous arguments are presented to show that the war could end with an allied victory by early summer. Many persons are willing to wager that the fighting will not extend beyond August. On the other hand there are others who hold to the theory of a long war, contending that the axis powers still hold the upper hand and will not be halted without much effort and sacrifice.

It is to be hoped, of course, that the exponents of a quick end to the struggle are correct, but all action should continue to be based on the premise that the war is to continue for many more months. Hopes should not be set too high that the summer will see the end of the war, because the odds are too heavy that a believer in that theory will suffer tremendous disappointment.

The only policy is to anticipate a long war and to adjust national life to that contingency.

Such position means that purchases of war bonds and stamps must continue on ever increasing scale. It means that family budgets must be arranged to meet greatly increased taxation. It means more and more rationing of commodities. It means, in many cases, loss of business and position—an uprooting of a family and a switch to new lines of employment and activity. These are things that must be faced, and rightly so, whether we believe the war is ready to end tomorrow or continue on for years. There is only one safe position and that is to prepare for the worst. As long as preparations are made to meet the greatest power the axis can muster, there is no danger of an allied defeat. On the other hand, too much confidence in an early allied victory could easily prove fatal. Boxing fans well know that a fighter who sometimes appears hopelessly beaten comes across with a knockout punch. Our guard must never be dropped just because the opponent is staggering and shows signs of weakness. We must keep punching harder than ever.

There must be no relaxation in the war effort. Every good American must conserve his income for taxes and bonds and must voluntarily contribute, through war savings, every dollar possible. Thrift for several years has been a forgotten art in the United States, as the nation engaged in an orgy of spending unparalleled in history and is still continuing. But today thrift must be the watchword in every American family, even though the official family is still lagging in that regard. The duty of every citizen is plain—individually and collectively we must devote every effort to the winning of the war whether victory comes now or later. We must anticipate that the struggle will be long and arduous. If it ends soon our joy will be that much greater. —C. V. S.

Kerch by striking at Kharkov.) There is an interesting story of Russian guerrillas capturing a city of "several thousands" deep in the German rear and holding it against a day-long German counter-attack. This gives an idea of the extent to which the Germans have failed to take over and completely organize that part of Russia lying in the rear of their defense lines. It emphasizes Russia's vastness.

RED STAR (the Russian army newspaper) says the Germans' heavy losses of tanks in the battle for Kharkov has caused them to change their tactics, GIVING UP mass mechanized counter-attacks and relying instead on infantry attacks supported by only 10 or 15 tanks.

This, if true, is extremely important, meaning that in the great battle of the tanks that has been raging at Kharkov the Russians are proving SUPERIOR, inflicting tank losses on the Germans that are relatively disastrous.

In war, it doesn't matter so much what you lose if you can inflict HEAVIER losses on your enemy.

AN interesting note in the news: Goering is reported to have told German workers in Berlin that this is "the hardest war Germany has ever had to fight." He is quoted as adding that Hitler "suffered deeply for his troops in the bitter months of the soviet winter," but knew he mustn't yield.

REFER back here to the rumors several days ago that Goering is in disgrace and has been relieved of command of the German air force. There were even tales that he might go to Portugal to meet allied diplomats and presumably talk peace.

The implication of these rumors was that he was in the dog house and mad about it.

THIS incident teaches us that we mustn't pay much attention to yarns about German weakness and dissension.

War and football have much in common.

Recall here the ancient football custom of putting out bear stories in advance of big games in the hope of leading the other team to underestimate your strength.

If you go into a hard fight with the cocky and foolish idea that you can lick your opponent with one hand tied behind you're always at a distinct disadvantage. German propaganda is obviously aimed at getting us into that dangerous frame of mind.

Sprague Assures Japs Of Full Protection

PORTLAND, Ore., May 23.—(AP)—Oregon's Governor Sprague, disappointed because only 15 Japanese evacuees at an assembly center here volunteered to work in eastern Oregon and Idaho sugar beet fields, yesterday offered them reassurance of full protection.

A quota of 200 evacuees to alleviate the acute labor shortage in the beet fields was filled early this week but later most of the Japanese withdrew as many expressed fear of their status upon their arrival.

The token contingent of 15 was due to arrive today at Nyssa, Ore., where the farm security administration had prepared a mobile farm labor camp.

Ernest Leonetti, manager of the wartime civil control administration here, said he felt certain other evacuees in the assembly center would volunteer for work in the beet fields after they receive letters from the first group describing conditions there.

Khaki Outfits Decried For Women's Army Unit

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(AP)—Members of the women's army auxiliary corps will be chic in khaki.

The war department has picked the uniforms, and aside from silks and satins there's quite a variety of materials.

Skirts will prevail in all cases. For summer there's khaki cotton twill and gabardine. For winter there's olive drab covert cloth.

The hosiery will be cotton and rayon, but no one in the department had a word to say about the underthings, either summer or winter.

A WAAC officer in the winter-time will wear a single-breasted, four-button dark olive drab jacket of covert cloth and a six panel flared skirt of light or dark olive drab. A covert cap will have a semi-stiff crown, a visor and a cloth chin strap.

Regular army khaki will be the summer color and the uniforms will be of cotton twill and gabardine for the officers and garrison water repellent twill for the ratings, or enlisted personnel.

Mauriello Draw With Pastor Surprises Fans

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP)—The understatement of the year would be to say today that the look on Joe Louis' face was one of simple surprise when he heard the announcement that gave Tami Mauriello a draw with Bob Pastor.

And since Promoter Mike Jacobs felt the same way, Uncle Mike said today he "didn't see why" the outcome of last night's ten-round thriller in Madison Square Garden "should change whatever plans are in the making" for a late-June or early-July tussle between Pastor and the bomber.

Those at ringside last night came pretty close to being unanimous that Pastor had whipped Mauriello, in spite of the Fordham flail's fast start, and a finish in which he and Bob stood head to head and banged away for minutes at a time.

Paul Lund, Bowler, Sets New High on Alleys Here

Breaking the local alley record for high game score, Paul Lund, local bowler, Thursday night made the nearest approach to a perfect 300 score that has been rolled on the Roseburg alleys since they were opened here. Lund rolled a 288 score, breaking the former alley record of 278 held by Deb Day, who was employed in the local alleys following their opening.

Lund's score was made in open bowling while rolling practice games with Walter Roser. He filled 10 frames with strikes but struck a split in the 11th to ruin the chances for a perfect score.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 23.

At the top of the list of the 48 states in number of automobiles per capita are California, Oregon and Washington. The so-called "saturation point" was passed years ago by these states. This summer will see thousands of cars in the northwest off the road and businesses which are sustained by rubber-borne customers are in for hard luck. On the arterial highways the hamburger stands, restaurants, places which are strictly for entertainment, such as night clubs fringing the edges of many cities, the little stores, the auto camps and motels will soon be taking a beating. This loss of trade (no one can estimate the dollar cost) will be distributed over every section of the three states. On the highways business will be paralyzed, and the creeping paralysis has set in; will spread until business is reduced to zero.

With a few exceptions every beach resort may be dead as a dodo; the summer homes in the mountains and in lake districts will be closed. Only exceptions will be those places which can be reached by bus or train, and it may as well be told office of defense transportation intends a rationing system for bus lines and trains. There will be a few pleasure cars with good tires this summer and, if they can get sufficient gas, they may go to the old resorts and cottages; but the great mass of motorists will not wear out their tires unnecessarily.

Trains Will Be Busy.

Troop movements to the coast and freight for the shipyards will use thousands of railroad cars. What it means moving troops and equipment alone is best indicated by the fact that 1,420 cars are calculated as necessary to move a division of 12,000 men. These cars are broken down into 75 trains of 20 cars each. A heavy troop movement to the northwest can be expected in a few months; not one division, but many divisions. This will tie up rolling stock, adding a further shortage to sleepers and day coaches for the traveling public. There are not as many cars on the rails today as there were in the first world war and locomotives are sadly required by every transcontinental carrier.

To conserve the freight cars an order will be issued which will forbid the use of freight cars for shipment of goods which can be hauled by motor trucks, especially all short-haul business between cities. This is one break the motor transport will receive from ODT, and another will be the elimination of barriers between states.

With the increasing demands on railroads the carriers are also having difficulty in securing enough workers. The draft has caught some, others have been sent abroad where they are building and operating railroads. Soon the carriers will be calling back retired trainmen and not being too particular about their physical condition. Railroads are preparing to hire women for such work as they can do, taking the place of men. In the last world war women were cleaning the passenger cars in all terminal yards of the northwest. They are again to be used for this work.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Gladness is the keynote of true worship. For who that has attained even in a small degree the understanding that God is ever-present life and love, could allow apathy, indifference, or discouragement to hold sway over his thinking? The true understanding of God gained through a careful study of the scripture enables the Christian to express that joyousness and peace which no earthly source can impart. Earnest followers of the teaching of this "word" abound in gladness of heart, and readily accept the spiritual values contained therein. St. Paul, speaking to the Athenians on Mars hill said: "Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." No longer need we worship an unknown God, ignorantly supposed to be capable of anger and hate, favor and disfavor, of sending famine and pestilence and other disasters upon humanity. The word of God brings gladness and deliverance from evil and we can truthfully say the Lord will preserve us from all evil. He shall preserve Thy soul, a knowledge of God's power, and man's inseparable relation with Him is indispensable to the happiness of each Christian only as we worship God in spirit and in truth can the spirit reveal the presence of God in the heart that brings gladness of heart to the individual. Amen.

Poffenberger's Hurling, Batting Win for Padres

(By the Associated Press)

Poffenberger, San Diego hurler, outdid all the participants in the two Pacific Coast league baseball games played last night as his team blanked Oakland 6 to 0.

Not only did he lead the batting parade with three safeties for two runs in four tries, but he also allowed only six spaced hits, half as many as three Oakland twirlers yielded.

Chelini, the losing pitcher, came to bat in the third slightly nettled by the four runs scored off him in the second frame, protested a called third strike and was promptly ordered out of the game.

Corbett took over on the mound for the Oaks and was blasted for six hits and two runs before Ananiez relieved him.

The win enabled the Padres to strengthen their hold on second place to a full game over Seattle, one of the four coast teams kept idle by postponements.

The Rainiers and San Francisco were to make up the last game in an afternoon doubleheader today while Portland and Los Angeles are posted to play a doubleheader tonight to catch up.
