DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

On July 4th of the year just passed, music rang through the echoing crypt of St. Paul's cathedral, still miraculously standing after London all about it had been battered to rubble. The occasion was the unveiling of a memorial tablet to Billy Fiske, the first American to give his life in this present war. The singers were the fliers from his own squadron and certain other young American volunteers standing together in the candielit dusk. This symbolic group of Anglo-American courage sang Billy Fiske to his rest with the words.

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord: He is tramping out the vintwords:

age where the grapes of wrath are stored.

Fragments of the hymn came back to Correspondent Quentin Reynolds when he was describing that service in an overseas broadcast addressed rather pointedly to Dr. Goeb bels in Berlin. He has sounded forth the Those words are part of the national wealth. Words which will last as long as America does, perhaps longer. They were written by Julia Ward Howe, and she sent them to the Atlantic Monthly. The edition affixed the title "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and tle Hymn of the Republic," and published them in February, 1862, Amen.
