WASHINGTON, June 9-(AP)-Urging immediate construction of a highway to Alaska west of the Rocky mountains and condemning the inland route road now being constructed as a "waste of millions and millions of dollars," Congressman Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) said today the United States is in danger of losing Alaska unless a western road is built.
The road now being built Magnuson said in remarks prepared for delivery in the house, follows a route "so fantastic" that it had been ignored by the American and Canadian international highway commissions. The American commission selected "Route A" west of the Rockies, running from Prince George, B. C., to Alaska, and the Canadian group chose "Route B," also starting from Prince George but running east of the Rockies.
The road being developed is known as "Route C" and stretches from Fort St. John, Alta., to Alaska.
Selection of the route will result in the wasting of millions of dollars for a road that will never be practicable, Magnuson said. The selection was made arbitrarily and when it became known members of the Canadian commission wired the American commission urging that the plans be stopped, he declared.
Fourteen bombers or pursuit planes being flown to Alaska have crisscrossed on the mountains near one of the fields at Watson lake, he declared.
"I am told that the loss of life has been small, if any, but many needed aviators are now in the hospital at Whitehorse."
Either of the two western routes could be built for $50,000,000 while the route selected by the army will cost "not less than $100,000,000 if it can be built at all," the congressman said.
