Restrictions on Metals, Silk and Rubber Revised

WASHINGTON, July 8.—(AP)—The war production board yesterday revised restrictions on inventories, freeing hundreds of thousands of tons of copper, aluminum, rubber, silk and other critical war materials now idle because of WPB regulations.

Officials said the new order would release about 250,000 tons of copper and copper-base alloys alone for the free movement into industrial channels, and provide immediate relief for hard pressed firms which have much of their capital tied up in frozen inventories.

WPB said it was impossible to estimate the total idle stocks affected, but placed their value at "hundreds of millions" of dollars.

Most important change was elimination of the necessity for obtaining formal WPB permission for transfers of idle critical materials. Companies now may make sales without obtaining approval from Washington.

All existing priority regulations and WPB orders will continue to apply to buyers, however. The regulation also establishes certain restrictions covering persons to whom war materials may be sold, the uses to which they may be put, and which priority ratings, if any, are necessary in buying them.
