DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

In the tumult through which mankind is passing, problems sometimes present themselves which test our best wisdom. One of these problems is that of grief. Doubtless grief has its lesson, but we can learn to bear our sorrows patiently. Because of Christ's love for God and man, He came to show humanity that real life cannot and should not be destroyed by grief and sorrow, and his resurrection proved that the eternal relation of man and God is not touched by the experience of death; "because I live, ye shall live also." Jesus demonstrated the power of God over material things, by coming forth from the gates of death. Following His example we too can refuse to accept the grief and sorrow of life as eternal. To be consecrated to life is to be able to overcome all fear of death. St. Paul tells us that "neither death, nor life, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature can separate us from God, if we put our trust in Him. When we think of 'all these things,' our personal griefs and sorrows are lost in the infinite fullness of God's love. For we have received not the spirit of bondage but the spirit of adoption and become heirs and joint heirs with Christ. Amen.
