Grocery Industry Caught in Squeeze, Assn. Head Says

NEW YORK, July 30.—(AP)—Paul S. Willis, president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, Inc., said yesterday the office of price administration had failed to "relieve the squeeze in which this industry is caught like a vise."

As a result, he said, "the industry has asked the OPA to permit distributors to add to their March ceilings—there they are—lower than replacement costs—an amount in dollars and cents equivalent to the lawful increased delivered costs to them."

Asserting that the food industry considered the objective of the price ceiling order excellent, Willis said, however:

"In spite of the pleadings of the leaders of the food industry, the OPA disregarded the fact there is a customary lag of at least 30 to 60 days between the time a manufacturer issues a net price list and the time when a wholesaler puts it into effect. There is an additional delay before retailers pass the change on to the public."

As a result of the "impossible situation," Willis said, more than 400 grocery items have a replacement cost for distributors out of balance with their frozen ceiling prices.

"This," he said, "has already seriously disrupted the business of the manufacturers and the entire system of food distribution."
