American Legion Auxiliary Activities

By MRS. C. E. ROSELUND

The 1942 Oregon State American Legion and American Legion auxiliary convention is concluded as to time and place but all legionnaires and their auxiliaries hope, pray, and pledge that the results may be many and lasting.

Twenty-four large American flags and a like number of auxiliary unit flags formed an impressive background on the stage and fairly permeated the entire convention time with an inspiring atmosphere of patriotism.

A highlight of the convention was the twenty minute speech of Mary Murrill, national president of the American Legion auxiliary. Wtih true Bostonian accent she held the joint meeting spell-bound as she told of the part women are to take in the war effort and the peace to come.

"Women can spike instead of spread rumors by asking definite information as to who told who, and when and where. Probably for good reason has it been said, 'Tell a woman something and it goes into her ears, out of her mouth and everywhere; while with a man, it goes into his ears and gets stuck.' Remember about the letters not mailed?" stated Mrs. Murrill.

After giving an astounding group of statistics of food consumed by Americans, Mrs. Murrill said, "In spite of our opportunities of food selection, over 150,000 of our boys failed to pass military physical examination because of malnutrition. We fight for our rights as citizens yet we have failed our children. The women of America would do well to study their nutrition charts."

"We need to pray," stated Mrs. Murrill. "The next month is very important. The longer Russia can hold out against the hordes of Hitler the more strength we can gather to carry the war to the aggressors. A soldier boy just returned from three years in the tropics told me," continued the president, 'our chaplain made us content because he helped us pray. Four hundred of us gathered weekly in a chapel built for one hundred capacity. Above the door was inscribed, 'We are not poor—we can pray.' There were no atheists in the fox holes of Bataan.'"

For God and country our preamble begins. Women of America, lead a back-to-the-church movement! With a growth in faith will come the wisdom and strength to gain and preserve a good and just peace. A peace which can last because women will help dictate it in terms of home, and love, and little children. A Golden Rule peace instead of that man-made economic armistice of scarcely over twenty years ago; a peace that failed because the idealistic something that the boy of '17 died for—"To make the world safe for democracy,' was lost somewhere—sidetracked—and America failed. The American Legion and auxiliary take the blame for this war because legislation to make America strong was not championed in strength enough to make it a reality and America in 1941 was unprepared.

"Today over 13,000,000 women have jobs," continued Mrs. Murrill. "This is right and women should shoulder work wherever needed now. But, after the war is over it must not be like it was that other time. When the boys come marching home this time they must have their jobs. And let it be remembered that that almost extinct art of home-making is still the most important job of all for women!"

"The labor union problem must also be tackled by women. It is admitted labor should make its own protection. But the way they function and all their books should be open to the public. The pendulum has swung so far that labor has been made a slave to a few leaders and must pay tribute for the privilege to work. Labor unions have become labor rackets. This is not politics—it is a challenge. Labor needs to overthrow rotten management and get rid of its leaches."

Mrs. Murill then cautioned women of tiring of war work. "Many have rushed to this and that; Red Cross, canteen, motor corps, filter center; but too many are dropping out. It is the duty of the Legion auxiliary to carry on. They have the experience of the last war and should be examples of fortitude and encourage others to serve."

If answering the call of duty is the measure of our patriotism, Roseburg is found wanting, for many are needed at the filter center and if you are not enrolled in some other program of the war effort, consider it a privilege and duty to go at once to the armory and help in this easy, pleasant and very important way to serve.

"We, the women, must not allow America's strength to be scrapped after we attain the kind of peace we must have," the president continued. "After the last war we sold 227 of our ships to junk dealers, destroyed 478 others and then some years later scrapped 237 more to celebrate a treaty with a dastardly nation named Japan. Next time we must remain strong enough to demand peace for the world."

In conclusion Mrs. Murrill said, "The homemakers of America would do well to study the report of California auxillary scholarships. It is a fact that most of them were won by Japanese children. What can this mean except that generally speaking we have been weak in mental discipline which has resulted in a trend toward indulgence rather than endurance. To do without will be good for us all. Home has become a place to escape and this must be changed. Keep the four walls of home intact. There are history, literature, games, neighbors, to enjoy. It is high time for women to be worthy of the rights of suffrage."

Hermit Lives 9 Months In Home of His Victim

DENVER, July 31.—(AP)—Trapped in the tiny attic of a house that children believed haunted, a wispy, half-starved man has admitted, Detective Captain Childers said today, beating to death the aged home owner, and then living furtively in a cubbyhole of the house for nine months.

Gaunt and clad in old clothes tied together with a rope, the man said he was Mathew Cornish, 59, once an advertising salesman in Tonawanda, N. Y.

He was captured yesterday in the small brick house of Phillip Peters, 73-year-old retired railroad auditor, who was found beaten to death in a blood-spattered bedroom last October 17.

"I killed him because he caught me robbing the ice-box," Captain Childers quoted Cornish as saying.

Subsequently, Cornish related, he was able to creep from the house and forage for food by raiding neighborhood ice-boxes and by prowling stores.
