

Greetin's to those of you who have yet the fortitude to breeze through the Crier's weekly communique. You know, I'm darned disappointed that, as yet, not one has accused the T. C. of stealing Marshall Pen-gra's "Cal Tinney's" stuff—his line, I mean. Frankly, I can't stand it, but if ye public wants a bit of nonsense scattered in with your readin' and list'n—far be it from me, etc. I got to thinking, when I passed the Handy Stand today, just what a good business-man will do to satisfy his customers. Take Tom Atkins, for instance! On his shelves he's got 24 kinds of smoking tobacco—two dozen brands so that Tom or Dick or Harry will BE SURE to get the one that suits his taste. AND to make satisfaction even more satisfying the Handy Stand is prepared to get your favorite if it isn't among the 24 ordinary and special blends. Now, if this doesn't fill your bill, well, you just don't have any right to smoke. The little extra service that I enjoy at Atkins' place is that packet of matches that goes FREE with each tobacco purchase. What the heck good is a smoke without a match around handy?

Now, if I've got any feminine readers left after my essay on smoking I'll pass on to them a little news about kitchen fixin'. Perhaps you didn't know that right here in Roseburg is the home of one of the cleverest innovations in kitchen planning yet to draw the pound of the carpenter's hammer. Actually you DESIGN your own kitchen—suit it to your taste—see it BEFORE it's built. The Coen Lumber company has hundreds of units, built to scale, from which you can select and put together your "dream kitchen." About doll house size, these pieces represent the units that can transform your "kookery" into a magic room where all the kitchen tasks will become pleasures. Take the models you want and fit them together to fit your floor plan the way you want them to. Phone Coen's Lumber company for more information today. (This reads like a KRNR spot announcement but it gets over the idea—I hope.)

Almost busted up a happy home on my latest rounds. This week both Mike and the Mrs. were on hand at their Upholstering and Mattress shop. When I asked what to pass on to the dear readers each had an idea—Mrs. Gomes on repairing automobile upholstery and Mike on the deadline for the making of new furniture—but show me ten people and I'll show you ten different ideas on advertising. Timidly I sided in with Mike because he had some important news about another of those orders a la Washington, D. C. He explained that after November 1, 1942, no new furniture with steel springs or containing steel could be built. To a lot of you this is the "hurry-up" sign. Get your Christmas orders in now so that the work can be completed before November 1. Remember, Gomes Upholstering and Mattress Shop builds your davenport and chair set, styled as you want it and upholstered with material of your own choosing. Better than factory made pieces at below factory wholesale prices. And now, may I brush another government order off my vest?

Right in the middle of my visit to the Roseburg Pharmacy a customer burst in and asked to see something they HEARD advertised over my nemesis, the radio. I was embarrassed until I saw they were looking, not buying. If you really want something to look at take a squint at Bob Harris' new shipment of Yardley soaps, talcs, colognes, and gift sets. As for something I know you'll want to BUY (I read it in the Town Crier) ask Bob to see the Yardley of London Trio Set—three cologne odors in a cleverly styled set that's ideal

About the most timely window in town was the one I saw at the Roseburg Book Store. With approaching long winter evenings, the rain and the cold, you can be sure of entertainment, no end, with a couple of new games around the house. The book store window is chock full of the latest card table fads—Quiz, four games in one: Super-man, game of speed; Sea Raider, Lucky Dollar, Bingo and Blockade, the game for armchair admirals. There's plenty of fun packed into those boxes. Ask Sam to see my favorite—the new war-time game of Blockade. By the way, looks as if I'll play most of my Blockade in a pup tent—as I sit here I feel the warmth of khaki.

Do you have time on your hands? If you do just skip this paragraph, unless, of course, the time on your hand (wrist) is about three paces ahead of the scrap pile. If you haven't braved the depth (?) of this pun yet—we're talking about watches, wrist watches. Luckily M. Lawson's can brag about having an unusually complete stock priced from $16.75 up. With watch factories now turning out mechanisms for bomb sights and torpedoes this situation won't last long. For the college student a watch is a near Godsend. Why? Take in a lecture on the theory of the depression cycle some fine day and ten to one your watch will be your favorite piece of scenery—how much longer will it last!

Unfurlingly I'll come through with a tip for your next visit to Horn's house of Super sodas, shakes, sundaes and sandwiches. Personally, I have a lot of faith in the suggestions offered by waitresses—they've had more opportunity to concoct new sundae recipes and give 'em the test. This week I tried an idea sponsored by a not-half-bad looking brunette—a Hawaiian Delight Sundae. Rich ice cream full of pineapple, strawberries, and cherries, topped with a tempting real pineapple syrup. Of course my word isn't as inviting as that of a good lookin' brunette, but try it just the same—without the dame.

Shorty Guy accuses me of slinging the adverbs and adjectives—in short the shoe man what am I do a fair job of peddling the bull. I can't offer any evidence to the contrary, in fact I'll try to live up to the rep as I extoll the virtues of Shorty's Shoe Repair. To my way of thinking Shorty is just about number one when it comes to turning back the mileage on worn-out shoes—actually, Shorty says there just isn't such a word as "worn out." They (your shoes) may be worn but not OUT. You'll save if you look through the closet and get out the worn pairs of shoes and drop them at Shorty's Shoe Repair, next to Fisher's, for a "fountain of youth treatment." Shorty does to shoes what Wheaties do for athletes—they say. That's 30, my friends. During my leave of absence, next week, I leave the Crier duties in MME's able hands.

Pacific Coast on Alert For Japs, Mott Declares

ASTORIA, Aug. 31.—(AP)—No Japanese attack on the Pacific coast would catch the defenders by surprise.

So said Rep. James Mott in an address before the chamber of commerce here Saturday, adding that if the enemy should come he would receive the same disastrous punishment he absorbed in the battles of Midway and the Coral sea.

The congressman said west coast naval stations are the most modern and best equipped in the continental United States.
