American Legion Auxiliary Activities

By MRS. F. L. CRITTENDEN
Anyone seeking applications to the American Legion auxiliary has been asked to apply to Mrs. S. W. Van Voorst or Mrs. Jackson.

There is still some yarn at the Red Cross rooms for anyone interested in knitting. Also new classes in canteen, nutrition and home nursing are starting and auxiliary members are asked to please keep this in mind and notify Mrs. McNeill of the number of hours you put in at these various things, so this unit may have due credit.

The American Legion and auxiliary set forth today to the annual national convention in Kansas City. Jack Crafton, of Roseburg, was among the Oregonians leaving for the convention.

For the benefit of women's organizations desiring to use the American flag at their meetings this wartime year and are concerned about its proper display, the following explanation of the new law passed by congress in June prescribing the correct manner of presenting and displaying the flag, is given. This law was passed and was called by the American Legion, which is responsible for it:

"I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all," be given by standing with the right hand over the heart; extending the right hand palm up words, "to the flag," and holding that position until the end when the hand shall drop to the side. Persons in uniform shall render the military salute."

Display Explained.
Concerning the display of the flag at meetings, the new law provides that "when used on a speaker's platform, the flag should occupy the position of honor and be placed at the speaker's right as he faces the congregation or audience. Any other flag on the platform should be at the speaker's left."

When a flag is displayed from a staff in a church or public auditorium not on a platform, "it shall be placed in the position of honor at the right of the congregation as they face the platform." (This flag is considered the audience's flag.)

When used on a speaker's platform, the new law further prescribes, "the flag, if displayed flat, should be above and behind the speaker. The union should be uppermost and to the observers' left."

Other important rules for the display of the flag, as set forth in the new flag law, follow: "The flag of the United States of America should not be dipped to any person or thing. Regimental colors, state flags and organizational flags are to be dipped as a mark of honor. Crepe streamers may be affixed to spearheads or flagstaves in a parade only by order of the president of the United States.

"The flag should never be used for advertising purposes in any manner whatsoever. It should not be embroidered on such articles as cushions or handkerchiefs and the like, printed on paper napkins or boxes; or used as any portion of a costume or athletic uniform.

"When the national anthem is played and the flag is not displayed, all present should stand and face toward the music. Those

War Production Training Set In State Farm Areas

SALEM, Ore., Sept. 16.—(Special.)—Rural war production training to aid the individual farmers to make and carry out the plans for reaching the farm commodity goals designated by the secretary of agriculture will be conducted in over 200 rural high school communities this coming winter. O. I. Paulson, state director of rural war production training, announced today. Provision is also made for training local mechanics to replace those who have entered war industries and the armed services.

Any out-of-school person who has reached the age of 17 years may enroll in any of the 14 short unit courses approved by the secretary of agriculture and the U. S. office of education. Since many farm women and girls are being required to do mechanical work on the farm and assist in managing the farm business, this training should better qualify them to serve agriculture, points out Mr. Paulson.

Besides conducting courses to help increase the production of milk, poultry, eggs, pork, beef, vegetables, lamb and wool, there will be four special mechanics' courses and one course in the repair, operation and construction of farm machinery and equipment. The courses will be taught by commodity specialists, experienced farmers, local mechanics and vocational agricultural teachers. The training program will be cooperatively administered through the local high schools and the state division of vocational education. All salaries and expenses will be financed through the state division of vocational education from federal funds.

Physical Defects Swept Aside To Boost U. S. Army

By JOHN GROVER
WASHINGTON — There's an amusing story about the army finally getting around to rescinding the rule—75 years late—requiring a recruit to have strong, opposed incisor teeth.

A check of the army's musty records disclosed that the rule did have some meaning once, 'way back when the infantrymen were equipped with muzzle-loading rifles and paper powder cartridges. They needed their snappers then to bite off the tops of the paper cartridges for quick re-loading, and loss of the teeth was ample reason for rejection of the rookie.

Now Only for Chow.
However, all actual need for cartridge-biting incisors passed when the breech-loading rifle was adopted, but the regulation remained on the books until this year, when it was decided that a rookie didn't need any teeth, provided he had synthetic choppers able to masticate his chow properly.

The experiment succeeded.

Heads Council

ERNEST W. PETERSON

Ernest W. Peterson, church editor of the Portland Journal, recently was elected president of the Portland council of churches.

They found that one-eyed men, men with fingers missing and other minor defects made cracking good soldiers. Oddly, it was found the physically handicapped had higher intelligence ratings than their physically sound buddies.

Barriers Lowered.
So, this presages wholesale acceptances of men who would have been thought physically unequal to military service two years ago. When they get around to drafting married men and men with children, it's probable that the slightly spavined middle-aged crocks will go right in the ranks.

Here's a partial list of defects that won't keep you out of army uniform any more: one blind eye, if the other can be corrected to 20-40 vision with glasses; deafness in one ear, if the other's hearing is 10-20; no teeth, if no disease of jaw present and dentures permit food mastication; less than three inches spinal curvature; missing great toe, hammer toes or webbed toes; moderate deformities of the upper extremities, lower extremities, clavicle, ribs or scapula, provided the individual followed a useful vocation in civil life; goitre, hernia, nutritional defects or any other condition repairable by simple surgery or treatment.

Just a reasonably complete assortment of arms and legs in fair working order is all the army asks now. They'll find a use for you.

S. navy aviation training.

Chapman was accused jointly with Russell Francis Aborn, 37, of illegally taking the car and the latter will receive sentence the first of the week.
