Work of Press In War Effort Wins Roosevelt Praise

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(AP)—The men who make a business of converting the world's events into ink so that all may read and know paused today and figuratively took stock of their record.

The occasion was the opening of national newspaper week.

America's press had plenty to pat itself on the back about. But it was too busy helping to win a war—not only any more than is any single fighter or worker or industry, nor even any single nation.

Its commander in chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, put it this way: "Our free press has not only survived—it is an essential part of the steady ballast which enabled our ship to ride the storm."

"War imposes grave new responsibilities on all of us, but upon no public servant does the responsibility for truth and integrity rest more heavily than upon the press. There is the duty of keeping the people fully and faithfully informed."

"The American people are vigilant of their precious heritage of a free press. They will permit neither its corruption nor its perversion for selfish ends. They will continue to regard it as their strong right hand in war as in peace. I believe that their confidence will be justified."

That confidence plus news ability has produced these actual results from the press thus far in the war, though the press isn't willing to call it the best yet:

Leadership in the nation-wide scrap drive.

What can't be measured in actual figures is the newspaper's role in the war of informing the people honestly of exerting voluntary censorship of facts which would harm the war program, of holding the confidence of national leaders so that sometimes the direction though not the exact path of the national effort may be pointed out to the people.

Winter Severity To Govern Fuel Oil Rationing

By PETER EDSON
(NEA Service Washington Correspondent)

Provisions on fuel oil rationing are gradually being worked out at Washington. Every possible contingency is being considered and every objection to every restriction is being weighed to prevent a repetition of the yowls brought on by the first gasoline rationing code.

Present indications are that the areas where fuel oil rationing will go into effect will be divided into five temperature zones, graded according to the severity of the usual winter weather experienced in each zone.

On an average, home owners burning fuel oil in their furnaces may expect to get about 75 per cent as much oil as they got last winter. But last winter was above average in mildness, so allowances have to be worked out to give more fuel oil if this winter should turn out to be more severe than last, less fuel oil if this winter should be even warmer than last. The margins being considered to take care of these alternatives is 10 per cent of last year's consumption, up or down. Thus the home owner would get from 65 per cent to 85 per cent of his last year's fuel consumption.

It is probable that extra allowances will be given to families with children under 4 years of age, and invalids.

Home owners who have done everything possible to insulate their houses by means of window and door strips, wall insulation, storm windows and so on, may be given extra fuel allowances. This may look funny at first, but the idea is to encourage every home owner with a non-convertible fuel oil heating unit to do everything he can to cut down on fuel consumption.

The quality that... is his knack of translating... sense on the very day that people want to hear about it.

September War Output "Spotty," Nelson Reports

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—(AP)—Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the war production board reported today that munitions output in September still was "spotty," indicating that the month's output of planes, tanks, ships and ordnance would not be closer to the goal than the August production record, which he has described as not a record "we can brag about."

Beginning with the first quarter of 1943, Nelson added, materials for war production will be divided among war plants on an "allocation and schedule" basis, instead of the present refinement of the priority system.

Nelson said that the production requirements plan, or "PRP," would be retained for only 25 to 35 per cent of the total armament industry. It has a "definite place" in those branches of production where material is handled on the basis of inventory—such as ball bearings, rivets, nails, and the lesser ingredients of the war machine whose production can not be scheduled on an item by item basis, he explained.

"But the bigger items—tanks and guns and planes—can be handled on the basis of materials schedules to meet the production schedules," Nelson said.

The production requirements plan got into full swing today, the opening of the year's fourth quarter.

WPB reported yesterday that allotments of materials for the civilian economy had been stripped down to absolute essentials in dividing up the nation's total supply among military and civilian claimants for the next three months.

Nelson told the press conference, however, that it probably would be "four or five months" before consumers would feel the effect of the reductions.

This is because of the considerable stocks of materials in the hands of manufacturers and the goods which already are in process of manufacture, he explained.

Guard Unit Here Seeks Recruits to Fill Vacancies

Company A of the 17th battalion, Oregon state guard, has several vacancies and can use recruits to replace men who have either moved from the county or who have joined the armed forces, Captain S. C. Dunn, commanding officer, reported today. The company is organized for military duty in case of enemy invasion or other emergencies, providing a reserve unit to protect civilian population, to handle civilian evacuation of areas threatened by invasion and to wage guerrilla warfare.

Age limits are from 17 to 65 years. Physical examination is required, but minor defects do not bar enlistment. At present each man is required to furnish his own weapons and uniform. It is anticipated, however, that uniforms and regular military equipment will be made available at some future date.

The guard company, it is stated, is of particular assistance to men who expect to enter military service at some future date, as basic military training is provided.

Regular company drill periods are held at 8 p. m. each Friday and persons desiring to enlist are invited to be present at that time. Enlistments also will be accepted each Wednesday night, when a special school is held for commissioned and non-commissioned officers.
