Service Man Hits Casualty Secrecy

SEATTLE, Oct. 12.—(AP)—The navy department has heard from at least one of Uncle Sam's fighting men at the front, in a stirring but simple letter, the belief that there should be no official hesitancy about giving full publicity to the nation's casualty lists.

Capt. Leland P. Lovette, director of the navy department's public relations, read the letter to conclude a talk to a civic group here yesterday. "I'd like to believe," the enlisted man wrote, "that if the Japs knock me off the newspapers back home will announce the fact, not as a tribute to me, but just so the fellows who knew me will know that one guy from a red hill in Georgia somehow found the courage to stay in there and fight."

"The government says the announcement of my death would scare the folks back home, depress them and make them want to fold up and quit. But, by God, I don't believe it's true. I'd like to think that when they hear the Japs have got me, instead of folding up and quitting, they'll send a thousand more guys right behind me to do the job I couldn't finish."

U. S. Marines Repulse Japs on Guadalcanal

paigned alone, the enemy's known losses total 40 ships sunk or damaged, against a loss of nine American warships—three cruisers, four transports and two destroyers.

Three Cruisers Lost.
The navy in Washington revealed late yesterday that the U. S. cruisers Quincy, Vincennes and Astoria were sunk by Japanese gunfire and torpedoes while protecting the landing of American reinforcements in the Tulagi-Guadalcanal area, August 8-9. Most of the American crewmen were saved, the navy said.

The three United States cruisers were lost in the same action as the Australian cruiser Canberra, whose sinking already had been announced by the Australian government.

The navy said it was not possible to determine the damage inflicted on the Japanese ships, which withdrew to the northwest without attempting an attack on our transports and supply ships.

It was the first offensive action reported for the marines in the Solomons since the early days of their invasion which began August 7.

On the New Guinea front, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported that allied troops had advanced within 12 miles of the Japanese advance base at Kokoda, at the base of the 5,000-foot Owen Stanley mountains, and were now battling the enemy in the region of "the gap" on the summit.
