DAILY DEVOTIONS DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

Manpower is a familiar word. The ebb and flow of fortunes in war are explained by manpower for fighting or for the production of implements of war. But this is more than a physical term. One cannot measure manpower by counting troops or laborers in the factory, or the numbers on a church roll. Statistics cannot record all of the resources. The Bible says that under certain conditions one shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight. It may not always be wise to insist upon these proportions. But the principle is everlastingly valid. The physical strength of a man must always be added to the strength of his soul, and his power for marshaling the resources of truth, righteousness and love. The universe is synchronized with the moral realities of God. It ultimately defeats hate, dishonesty and unrighteousness because it is a moral universe. It works together with love, truth and righteousness. When armed with these, man finds himself working together with God and time, regardless of the mere manpower operating to the contrary. Conscious of these reinforcements every man has a faith, a courage and a determination that makes him superior to physical manpower alone. A pure heart, a righteous cause, and a faith in a Divine Presence provides a strength sufficient to every task however difficult that task may be, "not by might, but by my spirit." Amen.
