Whether here or there

You know what I mean.

Our mothers are worrying

About those who have gone

Yet you don't find them shirking

They work and worry and pray.

Our boys are up and ready

To fight for liberty

We all can save and buy a bond

Yes! Buy for Victory.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

The past was not all good, and the present is not all bad. The dim and roseate light of memory too often bathes the past in colors far too fair. Evil is obvious; often good is obscure or hidden. It is too late to improve upon the past; and it is too soon to predict; and the future holds. Today, is the day, and it is ours, we receive the torch today from the hands of those who ran before us and then it is ours to run. But we start exactly where the preceding generation left off. Will we bemoan all modern trends and shield our torch from every threatening gale? Flame burns fiercest when athwart the wind. A friend of mine once received from another friend the figure of a torch-runner. But alas, the torch had been broken in the transit and the runner now held majestically aloft the broken base. Is it possible that sometimes we, running confidently, have lost the flame, and race with only a broken remnant in our hand? "To you from falling hands we throw the torch, be yours to wave it high. If ye break faith with us who die, We shall not sleep though poppies grow in Flanders' field." Amen.
