The Pinch Draws Near

WE civilians are just around the corner from those shortages about which there has been a lot of talk. It will not be long now before we shall be unable to buy items from an increasingly long list of luxuries and comforts.

Official spokesmen have warned that 300,000 retail stores will have to go out of business before the end of next year, and that we consumers will find ourselves back in the dark days of 1933, when the nation's worst depression was at its lowest point.

Competent business economists say that even this gloomy prediction is too optimistic, that in fact, we are going back to the pre-world war I era before many of our now accustomed gadgets first went into mass production and became available to the rank and file.

We have been warned about this prospect time after time and then have gone to the stores and found it possible to buy anything for which we had the money. After so many apparently false alarms some of us are a bit indignant now that the pinch begins to be felt.

We shouldn't be. The alarms were real. The warnings were legitimate. They may have been a bit premature, but the intention of that was to break the bad news gradually.

The reason why, up to recently, we found plenty of everything in the stores was that we were drawing upon a huge reserve stock, made before factories began converting to war production. But the stock was not being renewed, and now it is getting dismayingly thin.

There still are a lot of labor-saving, comfort-producing, even luxury items to be had. But as each store cleans out its own reserve it cannot replenish, and so for more and more items each week we have to shop from store to store in hope that, by good chance, we shall find one that still isn't sold out.

Fortunately the pinch is going to be worse in the commodity fields where it will do least real harm.

There is no overall shortage in the raw materials for food and clothing. Some items are scarce, and some will disappear entirely; we won't have the wide selection of brands, sizes, containers, etc., to which we have become accustomed.

As we watch retail outlets disappear and shelves become bare in those that remain, we can console ourselves with the thought that—however we are deprived by contrast with 1939—everybody in the United States still can get more of necessities, and will have more of comforts, than the average man had in 1914.

DAILY DEVOTIONS

DR. CHAS. A. EDWARDS

A worthy finish is better than a good beginning. The prizes of life are never bestowed on those who make a good start, but on those who win in the finish. Some people make a brilliant showing in the early stage of a contest. Everything seems in their favor, and they are far ahead of other competitors. But they are unequal to long and sustained effort, and they grow disinterested, lose sight of their goal, and begin to lag, others get a bad start and labor under terrific handicaps, but by persistent effort, by seizing every advantage and never losing sight of the goal, they finish triumphantly. Some grow weary in well-doing early in life. Others quit after long and arduous struggle. Many a worthy life goes down to defeat in the last stage of the game. Not how we begin, but how we end counts. The crown of life is promised to those that are faithful unto death. Thou wilt always rejoice in the evening if thou spend the day profitably.

"Work for the night is coming. Under the sunset skies; While their bright tints are glowing, Work for daylight flies. Work till the last beam fades, Fidelity to shine no more; Work while the night is darkening; When man's work is o'er." Amen.
