Brave Bird at Midway
This ignorant little bird probably doesn't know a tommy gun from a stick, so it perches innocently on the business end of the weapon used by one of the defenders of Midway Island. It is a white fairy tern, one of the many species of birdlife on the island.

North Africa Front Big as U. S.
If there was conflict going on from Seattle to New York across the northern half of the United States, it would be comparable to the battle now blanketing north Africa from Casablanca to Suez. Map compares size of U. S. with Africa.

A Different Kind of Action in Africa
(NEA Radio-Telephoto)
Even in the fiercest fighting, there's time for aid to the wounded. In this case, two members of an armored division of the AEF in Africa administer first aid to a French native soldier during an early phase of U. S. landing operations. Photo radioed London-New York.

Lunch Time in the South Pacific
There's no time out for you, soldier, or any other man when your warship's in a battle. During action against Jap forces off the Santa Cruz Islands last Oct. 26, a lookout and his "staker" aboard a U. S. vessel grab a bite to eat while keeping eyes and ears open for the enemy.
