

Censorship Draws Complaint From Alaskan Governor

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—(AP)—An investigation of the operation of wartime censorship was projected today by the senate judiciary committee as a result of complaints made by Governor Ernest Gruening of Alaska.

Chairman Van Nuys (D., Ind.) announced the committee would call Byron Price, director of the office of censorship, before it next week for an inquiry into the organization and methods used in the attempt to prevent military information from falling into enemy hands.

Van Nuys told reporters Gruening had complained in a closed committee session yesterday that the censorship office at Seattle, which checks communications with Alaska, was deleting material from private mail which had no connection with the war effort.

"Governor Gruening's protests were not so much against censorship itself but the way it was being applied," Van Nuys said. He added that he and other committee members desired to "see how the whole censorship setup is working."

Senator Norris (Ind., Neb.) said the committee had been informed that the Seattle censorship staff often sent excerpts from the mail read there to persons on a list of 35 officials they felt might be interested.

"That violates all form of American principles," Norris asserted. "None of it is serious yet, but it was not within the law. There is no more reason for censoring a letter from a person in Alaska to a person in one of the states than there is to censor a letter from Washington state to another state."

At the suggestion of Senator Donaher (R., Conn.) the senate yesterday recalled a bill it had passed last week authorizing the extension of censorship to communications between the United States and its territories and possessions, as well as communications between the territories and possessions themselves.

The law now authorizes censorship only on communications between the United States and foreign countries. Van Nuys said, adding that the bill originally was proposed to cover operations the committee since had found already were under way in the case of Alaska.
